Southerners Bolt Talks Over Coal Differential

Appeal to Mediation Board; Union Serves Terms on Bethlehem; Ford Strike Settled

Fresh labor difficulties appeared yesterday coincidentally with settling of others and what was termed by officials as a general brightening of the strike situation.

Briefly, the day saw these developments:

1. The prolonged soft coal tie-up was further snarled when Southern bituminous operators bolted the Appalachian conference which for weeks has sought a new contract for reemployment of 400,000 miners. The Southern owners flatly rejected proposed elimination of the 40-cents-a-day wage differential in their favor heretofore, and called for certification of the dispute to the National Defense Mediation Board. (Details on Page 4.)

2. The C. I. O. extended its demands for steel wage increases to include 100,000 workers in Bethlehem Steel. (Details on Page 4.)

3. A. C. I. O. notice to General. Motors Corporation of intent to strike unless contract negotiations are successful by April 20 was interpreted as an effort by the union to comply with Michigan law requiring advance notice of an intended work stoppage. In case of defense industries the waiting period may be extended to 30 days by the State, but Walter P. Reuther, of the union, was quoted as saying any General Motors strike would exempt employes engaged in defense work. He said union locals had been asked to authorize the taking of a strike vote. (Details on Page 4.)

4. Gov. Van Wagoner of Michigan, announced formally the end of the widespread Ford Co. strike, after the National Labor Relations Board had agreed to a Ford stipulation that a pending hearing on union complaints be delayed until after a collective bargaining election is held at the River Rouge plant under board auspices. (Details on Page 4.)

5. The Mediation Board announced settlement of the Seas Shipping Co. strike, and appointment of Lloyd Garrison as referee on points still at issue at the Allis-Chalmers plant. (Details on Page 4.)

6. Sidney Hillman, associate director of the OPM, said "labor relations are more satisfactory now than at any time since the defense effort started." (Details on Page 4.)

7. FBI Director Hoover declined to appear before the House Military Committee to tell of the FBI investigation into subversive activities in strikes. Representative Dies charged he has evidence that the Communist Party is planning a general strike in the aluminum industry. (Details on Page 9.)

Smiling Skies to Welcome Cherry Blossoms and Easter

Queen Nancy Strong to Be Crowned Today; 200,000 Visitors Expected Over Weekend

Nature, in springtime glory, will favor Washington with a brilliant sun and fair skies for the weekend welcome to cherry blossoms and Easter.

Even the fondest hopes of festival officials, Easter promenaders and an estimated 200,000 visitors, will be surpassed, the Weather Bureau promises. Today will be clear and bright with temperatures expected to reach a high of 70 degrees. Tomorrow will be mild and slightly cloudy.

Last night the city was prepared for its annual role as host at cherry blossom festivities. Final touches were added to the Tidal Basin scene where Miss Nancy Alden Strong, 19, the Cherry Blossom Queen for 1941, will receive her official greeting.

Overton to Present Crown

At 2:30 p. m. today Queen Nancy and her court of 14 princesses will mount a blue-and-white throne in Potomac Park at the foot of Seventeenth Street Northwest. An estimated 10,000 spectators—the largest in festival history—are expected to be on hand.

Flanked by her court the queen will receive a gold crown from Senator John H. Overton, of Louisiana, and the celebration will be underway.

But the famous blossoms will not be in full bloom. There was a pale pink hue around the Tidal Basin yesterday and with mild temperatures last night officials were confident the buds will burst forth even more today.

A. Clyde-Burton, assistant superintendent of National Capital Parks, cast a critical eye at the budding boughs yesterday and observed:

"The blooms won't be in their full glory until next Wednesday or Thursday, but they'll make a good showing for the festival. In fact, they are further along than we dared hope."

Easter paraders tomorrow will

Price-Freezing To Be Avoided By New Office

Agency Is Created By Roosevelt, Headed By Leon Henderson

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, created yesterday by President Roosevelt, will avoid a general "price freezing" order. Instead, it will seek to prevent inflationary spirals by attacking specific instances of price discrepancies while the situation is still in "embryo form," officials of the agency disclosed.

The super price organization, to be headed by Leon Henderson and to include his former price stabilization division in the Defense Commission as well as that on consumer protection headed by Miss Harriet Elliott, was invested with broad enforcement powers for its extensive duties to control prices of both civilian and defense commodities.

It was charged with preventing inflation resulting from "diversion of large segments of the Nation's resources" to the defense program.

According to officials of the agency, the name of which was quickly abbreviated to "OPACS," the mere investiture of compliance powers will probably be enough of an enforcement weapon to obviate

Attacks Reenacted

Boy, 17, Confesses He Beat Sleeping Man and Woman

A 17-year-old colored boy, an escaped inmate of the National Training School, reenacted for detectives late yesterday his confessed attacks on a man and woman in the Meridian Park section April 3.

The boy, Andrew Elkin Henderson, who will be 18 Monday, admitted he bludgeoned Mrs. Evelyn Kneeland, 32, of 2311 Fifteenth Street Northwest, and John S. Long, 30, of 1321 Belmont Street, with rocks while they slept. He said in his statement he was bent on robbing their homes.

He also admitted three robberies in Falls Church, Va., police said.

Andrew was arrested by two park policemen, Privates C. A. Mellott and J. T. Wirth, whose suspicions were aroused by the boy's actions in Meridian Park last Wednesday.

After his arrest they learned of his escape from the training school, April 2, and returned him to that institution.

The boy said he broke out of the school about 5 a. m., April 2, and hid in the marshes along the Anacostia River all day.

When night fell the youth said he walked uptown and shortly after midnight crawled into the Long apartment. He struck Long over the head with a cobblestone and

Red Sea Is Opened To U.S. Ships

Roosevelt Lifts Neutrality Ban To Allow Arms To Reach Egypt

(Map on Page 2.)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

For the first time since the start of the war, President Roosevelt yesterday opened a maritime route hitherto barred to American ships because it had been proclaimed a "combat area" under the Neutrality Act of 1939.

The President formally removed the designation of a combat area from the Gulf of Aden, thereby clearing the way for American vessels (and also aircraft) to reach the Red Sea and the Suez Canal.

The Chief Executive's proclamation came on top of the virtual fall of Italian East Africa, which, in his opinion, returns the Red Sea to the status it held before Italy entered the war. With a German raider operating in the Indian Ocean and with German bombers dropping mines in the Suez Canal, however, foreign observers pointed out that the American vessels would have to face certain wartime hazards.

London commentators predicted that President Roosevelt's action would lead the Germans and Italians in Libya to hasten their drive toward Suez. In a sense, therefore, the President's move was an expression of confidence in the ability of the British to thwart such a drive.

"Invaluable," British Say

He had indicated his intention of opening the Red Sea to American ships the previous Friday, three days before Nazi Germany's blitzkreig against Yugoslavia and Greece. At that time his prospective action was seen as a means of speeding war supplies to the Greeks and Yugoslavs, not to mention the British. The actual proclamation came yesterday at a time when to many it appeared doubtful whether there would be a "front" left in the Balkans by the time American ships could make the 14,000-mile voyage around Africa's Cape of Good Hope.

Nevertheless, the British, with their eye on Libya and Egypt as well as Yugoslavia and Greece, hailed President Roosevelt's action

Supply of Braid Cut Off, U. S. Navy Upbraids Hitler

Navy officers yesterday wondered whether OPM should be asked to solve one of their closest-home defense problems: namely, a shortage in the supply of gold braid needed for their uniforms.

It doesn't make them like Hitler any better to be reminded that France was this country's source of the material, and that Paris is in German hands. Only by dribbles is the shining material now available to American tailors and then at a price three and a half times what it was a year ago.

"Why just the stripes on a lieutenant commander's sleeves now cost him $16," a local uniform maker declared—refusing even to whisper off the record the amount an admiral would have to pay for the "ever so much wider" braid used on his outfit.

It seems to the tailor that Navy men are going to have to change their specifications, or accept cloth braid substitutes such as the Canadians are using.

Already specifications have been changed to eliminate gold braid "sword knots"—and there is a distinct emotional resistance in the Navy against further changing the uniform pattern or accepting substitutes.

Unless OPM can help, the tailor does not see what he can do. Already, he fears, "the supply we are getting has been bootlegged in from undisclosed sources."

Yugoslavs Take Back Nis, Key Rail City, Seize Reich General

By Michael Chinigo
By Wireless to International News Service

With the Yugoslav Government, Somewhere in Yugoslavia, April 11.—Yugoslavia's valiant defenders were declared late tonight to have checked the German advance in central Serbia at Krusevac and were reported to have recaptured several towns, including the key railway junction city of Nis. At least 170 German tanks were destroyed by Yugoslav troops.

A German general and numerous other prisoners were reported seized by the counterattacking Yugoslav battalions in the Krusevac sector, along with considerable quantities of Nazi war material as the stoutly resisting defense forces were authoritatively said to have stopped the German juggernaut rolling north and west from Nis toward Belgrade.

(Editor's note: This is the first direct word to the United States from Yugoslavia since a few hours after the German army began the invasion at dawn last Sunday and the Yugoslav government moved from Belgrade to a secret emergency capital.)

A terrific battle between German mechanized troops and Yugoslav regiments was raging southwest of the Vardar Valley railway city of Skoplje. There the Yugoslav troops were staging a tremendous effort to halt a powerful westward German drive that sought to effect a union with Italian forces in Albania.

Yugoslav hand grenades were reported to have destroyed 80 tanks of Adolf Hitler's Panzer corps in the Kacenik Pass, 25 miles northwest of Skoplje, and 90 tanks at

English Town Suffers Its 'Worst' Air Raid

A Southwest England Town (Saturday), April 12 (AP).—The worst German air attack ever launched on this town was carried out last night and early today by raiders who dared British ground defenses and night fighters. Numerous casualties were feared.

So many planes penetrated the town's defenses, that they made a continuous drone overhead during the raid.

Damage in some areas was "severe." Raiders and night fighters battled in the clouds.

Football Player Traps His Second Holdup Man Here

Nick Mantzouris, 19-year-old former all-high football tackle at Tech High School, proved last night that he can handle domestic bandits as efficiently as his Greek cousins take care of the international variety.

NICK

Two years ago Nick made a flying tackle and bagged a bandit who had held up the liquor store of his father, George, 1005 Seventh Street Northwest.

Last night, home from High Point (N. C.) College for Easter, he again was minding his father's store when a gunman came in and obtained $20 from the cash register.

Yelling "police" at the top of his voice, Nick chased the man for two blocks and cornered him in a dead-end alley at 610 L Street. He stood guard at the alley's entrance while passersby went after the police. Policemen C. E. Bean and G. F. Swank pulled a 22-year-old white man from an ash can in the alley. They found a pistol on him.

BULLETIN

Geneva, Switzerland, April 11 (AP).—The Berlin correspondent of the Tribune de Geneve reported today that it was believed Germany would demand from Ankara, "henceforth isolated," the right of passage across Turkey to gain the Mosul oil fields and move toward Syria and the Suez Canal.

By International News Service

Berlin, April 11.—Two German armies in southern Serbia and northern Greece were reported tonight to have met south of captured Monastir (Bitolj), forming a solid Balkan front that gravely threatened the rear and flanks of Greek troops in Albania and the British-Greek line southwest of Salonika.

With at least 50,000 Yugoslav troops and immense quantities of booty already in Nazi hands, Berlin sources predicted complete capitulation of Yugoslavia by Sunday and further declared that the Greek forces that have been fighting the Italians in Albania for five

Cairo, Egypt, April 11.—Reinforced British imperial troops were reported moving into positions east of the Gebel El Achdar Mountain range in Libya tonight for a second battle of Cirenaica with the resurgent Axis army.

2 British Generals Captured By Lone Nazi Motor Patrol

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, April 11.—British sources tonight related the stories of the capture by German forces of three generals and three brigadiers, and likened the seizure of some of them to "a Chicago gang kidnaping."

A German motorcycle patrol, wielding tommy guns, literally held up and captured Lieut. Gens. Sir Richard Nugent O'Connor and P. Neame, two brigadiers and three staff cars on a moonlit road early on the morning of April 7.

Gen. O'Connor, right-hand man of the British middle east commander in chief, Sir Archibald P. Wavell, and Gen. Neame left Marmaua headquarters with their staffs and aides de camp late the night of April 6.

They headed for Derna, in four cars.

The generals took a short cut to the main road, and about midnight came upon a convoy of British trucks delayed by a blocked road.

The staff cars were threading their way slowly through the convoy when a single German patrol motorcycle appeared, an eyewitness related.

A German soldier alighted from the motorcycle, drew his tommy

Athens Admits Foes' Motorized Units Have Hit Main Allied Line

BULLETIN

Athens (Saturday), April 12 (U.P.).—German "panzer" units have smashed through the Monastir Gap from southern Yugoslavia and clashed with the British and Greek forces massed in a defense line between Florina and Vevis, it was announced officially early today.

By the Associated Press

Athens (Saturday), April 12. The Greek high command acknowledged early today that German forces, coming through a gap in the Allied front at Bitolj, had reached the Greek lines in the Phlorina area of Greece.

Panzer units thus plunged some 25 miles into the left flank of the Allied line where both British and Greek units have been fighting since Thursday back of the remainder of the Yugoslav armies of southern Serbia.

A communique of the Greek high command said:

"German motorized elements coming from the direction of Monastir (Bitolj) came in contact with our forces in the Phlorina district.

"On the Albanian front, restricted activity of patrols and artillery."

This was not the only point of the line at which British imperial and Greek troops were locked in a great battle of motion. Other German divisions were attacking in force on the Allied right, within 48 miles of Mount Olympus.

Tonight's communique did not mention this attack.

Italy Claims Troops Have Reached Nazis

By the Associated Press

A junction of German and Italian troops just above Phlorina—the western anchor of the Allied battle line in northern Greece upon which the British, Greeks and Yugoslavs are fighting to hold a twin Nazi offensive—was announced by Berlin and Rome last night.

Adolf Hitler immediately telegraphed the following message to Premier Mussolini:

"At the moment when German and Italian units join hands for the first time in the Yugoslav theater of war I greet you most heartily."

The Italian wireless declared that Fascist troops striking from Albania had broken through to occupy Ochrid, just inside the Yugoslav frontier and lying hardly more than 40 miles northwest of Phlorina, and there had joined "the Hitler regiments."

The size of this merging Fascist force was not stated but it added power to the Nazi swing already smashing down on the Allied left flank in cooperation with another German force striking at the Allied right above Mount Olympus.

This dual, wheeling movement southward had begun after the completion of the German drive westward to the Albanian border regions which, Axis sources said, had wholly isolated Yugoslavia.

The German plan, it appeared, was not only to break through down the classic road to Grecian conquest—along the shores of the Farewell, Caesar?

What's going on in the Italian mind? What lies behind that wall of censorship? Saville Davis had to watch what he wrote during his 12 months in Italy, but now that he's home in free America he has written an amazing and enlightening article on the Italian situation. It tells what Italians now think of fascism—what the chances are for a revolution in Italy—why the successors to the conquering Romans aren't able to do much conquering. Will Italy collapse? Read Davis' article in Sunday's Post.

Historian Views War

If the history of past wars is a competent teacher, then pupil Carl Sandburg, who studied the Civil War for 11 years in writing his great Lincoln biography, should be a technical expert on the present war. But Sandburg confesses, in Sunday's column, that he is drifting, drifting from one opinion to another, drifting in sympathies, in attitude. If the question "what should America do?" has you bewildered, you'll appreciate reading Sandburg's thoughts.

What's happened to the "Knudsen legend"? For almost a year the man hailed as the answer to United States defense problems has been on the job in Washington. Alsop & Kintner look into what the year has done to and for Knudsen's reputation; evaluate his services to the country. In Sunday's Post.

More R. A. F.

While America ponders what to do, "Squadrons Up!" continues in The Sunday Post with the story of what England has already been doing—with its gallant airforce. Here's another installment of adventure—of miraculous escapes—of incredible courage—the true story of the R. A. F.

Spies in England

The Post's novel this week is tuned to the same key, swings along in the same martial cadence. It's a story of a girl who stepped from behind a department store counter in London to double for a heiress suspected of being an enemy agent by her own aunt! There's a handsome man in uniform, a detective, and a couple of foreign-named confederates to put real thrills into this spy story. Special notice: The heroine's name is NOT Dawn, or Ethelreda, or Sugarplum. It's just plain Dorothy Smith!

Best Sellers: Sunday's book page reviews Marcus Goodrich's "Delilah," story of life on a destroyer, and presents Barnet Nover's review of Winston Churchill's "Blood, Sweat, and Tears."

Postings . . .

Drew Middleton, recently returned from London, writes an imaginary report of the invasion of England. Eddie Folliard reviews the war's developments in this historic week. "Pictures," The Post Sunday roto section, gives a page picture story of a Washington draftee on his last night at home. And if you want still more about the war, we refer you to the Main News section, where, thanks to the famous five wire services, you can have your fill. As for us—we're going to talk about pleasanter things for a while.

Italians Blame Serb Situation On U.S., British

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 11.—The Italians reported a continuing advance into Yugoslavia on two fronts tonight and the Fascist press blamed the United States and Britain for what it called the collapse of that Balkan state.

[The Stefani, the official news agency, said Italians pushing into southern Yugoslavia from Albania had occupied Ohrid, Yugoslavia, on Lake Ochrida, and there effected the first juncture with German troops.]

The Fascist command said an Italian column occupied Longatico in extreme northwestern Yugoslavia and pushed on down the Sava Valley toward Ljubljana.

A Stefani, official Italian news agency, dispatch from the war zone said the British force had been unable to cope with the situation and had "let the Axis airforces conquer mastery of the Balkan skies."

Italian troops in Albania, the news agency said, instead of letting the Greeks, Yugoslavs and British encircle them had "resisted Serb attacks, then passed on to the offensive."

Fascist propaganda guns were turned on the United States and Britain for what was described as their responsibility for the "ruin" of Yugoslavia by promises of aid.

The Italian press called Col. William J. Donovan, who toured the Balkans on a diplomatic passport as an unofficial observer, "Washington's number one agent provocateur."

"It is not for nothing," asserted Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Ciano's Il Telegrafo, "that Col. Donovan, this ersatz ambassador of President Roosevelt, in his tour of the Balkans passed several days at Belgrade and had talks with Gen. Simovic, organizer of the coup d'etat. America, together with England, has been beaten in this Mediterranean adventure."

Plot Is Foiled

Virginio Gayda, Fascist editorial spokesman, wrote in Il Giornale d'Itlia that the Greeks had massed 20 divisions on the southern Albanian front and that the Serbs had assembled 15 "choice and well-armed" divisions on the north and eastern fronts to trap the Italians. Furthermore, he asserted the British had gathered submarines off the Dalmatian coast, "evidently to attempt to intercept traffic between the Italian and Albanian coast."

But, Gayda went on, the Allied plans were disclosed in advance by Yugoslav Premier Gen. Dusan Simovic "in conversations with high Italian dignitaries."

Blocked on the Italian front and in Albania, Gayda said, the "Yugoslav-Greek forces were surprised from the rear by the powerful and victorious irruption of the German army which rushed into the midst of the enemy offensive organization, breaking it up and converting it into a rapid collapse of men and equipment."

Great Allied-Nazi Battle Begins

Aegean toward such ancient fields of battle as Thermopylae and Marathon—but to breach the country in the west along the Adriatic and Ionian Seas.

Communiques of the British expeditionary force—under command of the stout, bald Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, who held the British sector with the hardy veterans of the brilliant Libyan campaign—acknowledged during the day that the German advance had reached a point 48 miles north of Olympus on the east. The invader reached and passed Yanitza in that area.

In the west the Germans—handicapped by the violent but apparently disorganized resistance of the surviving Yugoslav southern forces—drove headlong at Bitolj Pass near the Albanian frontier, to break through in force upon Phlorina. Down upon the long trains of German tanks and supplies British pilots poured their bombs.

Thus, in the phrase of the British command, was "contact" made on a new front that may determine whether the British are to preserve a foothold on the European continent.

There was at the same time a manifestation of growing fear in Ankara that Turkey, Britain's nonbelligerent ally, would be drawn in any day. There were widespread reports that a state of siege had been declared in Turkey and that civilian evacuation of the Dardanelles and a large section of European Turkey—as well as of Istanbul itself—had been ordered.

The Germans, claiming that the south Yugoslav army had been for practical purposes "destroyed," declared that Yugoslav prisoners numbered 50,000, with some 80,000 or more Greeks previously announced captured. The remaining southern Yugoslav forces, the Nazis said, were mainly Croats, and these were urged to surrender at once in view of the fact that an "independent" Croat state had been formed in Yugoslavia.

Hardly had the great battle been joined when the Germans alleged that the British had been ordered to fall back from secondary defense positions in northern Greece, leaving the Yugoslavs alone. The interception of a message to that effect—"Left wing threatened; withdraw"—was claimed by the official German news agency.

The Italians, working for a junction in force with the Germans, announced that their troops had occupied Longatico in northwestern Yugoslavia and were driving down the Sava Valley toward Ljubljana, the provincial capital of Slovenia, while another column was advancing eastward from Albania in the south. Fascist occupation of Ochrid in Yugoslavia, and a meeting with German troops there, also was claimed.

come of the new Libyan battle, despite recent German-Italian gains which British Prime Minister Churchill has termed a threat to Egypt.

Intense Aerial Activity

Informed British sources added that imperial troops were maneuvering east of the Gebel El Achdar Mountains toward Axis troops also on the move.

"British imperial forces are arriving daily in increasing numbers," the premier said. "This flow can only increase after the latest victories in East Africa."

Foreshadowing the battle was intense aerial activity by the R. A. F., which reported destruction of 34 Axis planes, including 22 in an "amazing two days," this week.

In a rout of 20 German dive-bombers and escorts, the R. A. F. said an Australian squadron destroyed five Junker bombers and three Messerschmitt 110 escorts.

"Even more disastrous," the report continued, "was the following day when 14 bombers which ventured out unescorted were shot down by British fighters." Eight other German planes were reported destroyed on the ground at Derna, about 85 miles west of British held Tobruk.

as "a welcome sign of American determination to do everything possible to assist the cause of democracy."

On Wednesday Lord Moyne, the British colonial secretary, told the House of Lords that the striking of the Red Sea from the list of combat zones would be an "invaluable help to us." He added:

"In view of the vast shipping effort involved in transporting heavily armored modern troops—about 12 to 15 average sized vessels per a division—it would be a big gain if the generous help of America under the lease-lend bill can be shipped straight by the Red Sea."

Could Be Taken to Egypt

Under the terms of the Neutrality Act, American vessels are forbidden to carry military supplies into a declared war zone. At his press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt said that the American cargoes could be unloaded in Egypt, which is neutral.

A reporter pointed out that the Neutrality Act also forbade the delivery of goods for transshipment to a belligerent. Would that question be explored, he was asked, in connection with the opening of the Red Sea?

The President said that this was a question of great legal complexity, and he added that one didn't buy headaches unless one had to.

The question of where the American supplies would be unloaded also came in for discussion. When President Roosevelt issued his proclamation on June 11, the day after Italy declared war on Great Britain and France, he didn't designate the Red Sea and the Suez Canal as combat areas. He simply plugged up the Red Sea by designating the Gulf of Aden (a strip of it from the east tip of Africa to the tip of Arabia) as a combat area.

President Roosevelt recalled all this yesterday and described his action as pulling the stopper from the Red Sea. Neither the Red Sea nor the Suez Canal, he pointed out, had ever been in any American-declared war zone.

The President was asked whether American ships would actually go through the Suez Canal or stop at the Red Sea entrance to it. He answered that it was a matter of geography—that Port Said was at the Mediterranean end of the canal and Ismalia at the other end.

A railroad connects the two, he said, but he didn't have the faintest idea where a ship might unload between those two points, or whether Port Said was regarded as a part of the Mediterranean, which remains a combat area, or as a part of the Suez Canal.

It is considered almost certain that the 36 Danish vessels seized in American ports will be put into the Red Sea run. The Maritime Commission also has a "pool" of 40 or 50 freighters that probably will be assigned to that service, in addition to some 20 or 30 ships that now run to Africa or India.

Undoubtedly American ships will sail from San Francisco and other West Coast ports to the Red Sea as well as from New York and other East Coast ports. This will permit the direct shipment of war planes built on the West Coast.

There is a difference of only about 25 miles between eastern and western routes from the United States to the Suez. A ship traveling at an average speed of 11 knots would require six to eight weeks on either route.

6 Yugoslav Ships Ordered Home

By the Associated Press

Rodolfo Michels, Chilean Ambassador, disclosed yesterday that six Yugoslav ships in service carrying nitrates from Chile to the United States had been ordered home, creating a serious shipping shortage for the South American republic.

He said that the Yugoslav boats were to leave Chilean ports immediately with supplies for Yugoslavia.

The Ambassador discussed with Undersecretary of State Welles the possibility of obtaining bottoms through the Maritime Commission to supplant the Yugoslav ships.

months may have to abandon Albanian territory immediately.

A general Greek retreat south from Albania back into the Nazi-invaded Hellenic peninsula was expected by Berlin observers to begin shortly in order to avoid entrapment in a huge German pincer movement rapidly being staged by Reich columns north and south of the Yugoslav town of Monastir.

In the hostilities of Good Friday the advancing legions of Adolf Hitler appeared to have cut off all hope of contact between the Greeks in Albania and the British and Greek forces reported lined up along a fortified line in the Olympic Mountains of northeast Greece. A German column, pushing south and west from the Yugoslav railway town of Skoplje in the Vardar Valley, was reported to have poured through the Monastir Gap where it joined hands with a Nazi Panzer force that advanced due west from Salonika.

From this junction Greece was invaded from a new direction as German mechanized units, supported by Stuka strafers, were reported pushing down the highway toward Florina, important Greek crossroads town which was one of the first objectives taken by the Italian invaders last fall before the Greeks launched their counter-offensive into Albania.

At the same time, an offshoot German column was believed heading due west from the Yugoslav frontier town of Monastir in a drive across southern Albania designed to hem in the Greek forces on Albanian soil from the rear.

Meanwhile, farther to the north another German army, based on Skoplje, was pushing to the central Albanian frontier via Tetovo in South Serbia, with the objective of joining hands with some 400,000 Italian troops and thereby completing the trap intended to catch the Greeks if they do not retreat from Albania quickly.

From the key central Serbian railway town of Nis, captured in the second day of the six-day-old Balkan blitzkrieg, the Germans were declared to be pursuing retreating Yugoslav troops to the west and north toward the Adriatic Sea, after "routing several additional Serbian divisions."

Several Yugoslav divisions were declared officially to have been "destroyed" and at least 10,000 prisoners, together with 70 guns and other war material, seized in central Serbia. In south Serbia the war prisoners now total some 40,000 and the booty includes 200 guns, a Nazi announcement said, claiming the "annihilation" of all Yugoslav resistance in that area.

The northern prong of Germany's Balkan steamroller meanwhile was declared to be sweeping south from the captured Croat capital of Zagreb—where an independent Croat state was proclaimed—into Bosnia where the historic town of Sarajevo, birthplace of the first World War, is situated.

(There was still no Berlin confirmation late Friday of foreign reports that German troops had captured the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade and also had taken the Slovenian capital of Ljubljana. A report reaching Vichy said low-flying German bombers once more raided air-ravaged Belgrade.)

British Again Bomb German Battleships

London, April 11 (AP)—Britain's reinforced bombers have struck again at German's bases for the Battle of the Atlantic, it was announced tonight, probably damaging the raiding battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau with armo -piercing explosives at Brest and burning out hangars at the long-range bomber station near Bordeaux.

Another raiding force was reported to have wrecked a section of Duesseldorf's industrial district in the Rhineland overnight.

Bundles of high explosives repeatedly straddled the drydock at which the Scharnhorst is tied up at the French naval base, the air ministry said. Others sprayed the quayside mooring of the Gneisenau.

There is "every reason to think that last night's attack must have been damaging," said the ministry.

Airdrome in Flames

It was the fifty-second attack on Brest and the fifth since March 30 when the British first reported the warships tied up there after a convoy-smashing raid in the western Atlantic. Following a raid on April 4 pilots said they believed they had damaged at least one of the ships.

At Merignac Airdrome, near Bordeaux, pilots reported seeing steel framework of hangars burned naked and many other buildings blazing. This is the base, the British said, of long-range four-motored Focke-Wulf bombers which raid convoys and guide U-boats to the attack.

Fires from bombs at Duesseldorf glowed through thick clouds, pilots reported. Many high explosives were seen to burst in the industrial quarter, and one large factory flew apart from the blasts.

Offensive patrols over the Channel and French coast also were carried out in daylight today, with one German fighter destroyed and one British plane missing.

Coventry Showered With Bombs

In addition a surprise attack was carried out in daylight yesterday on the North Sea German base on the Island of Borkum.

On the reverse side of the air war, the British acknowledged that thousands of fire and explosive bombs rained Thursday night on Coventry, Midlands industrial city, which has the record of being the worst-bombed city in England, and that Birmingham suffered a hard but less punishing attack.

Much new damage was caused in Coventry, and officials feared casualties would be high.

There were several thousand homeless.

A number of persons were trapped in wreckage at Birmingham, and many other parts of England underwent bombing.

Hail Roosevelt Action

The British said ten of the German raiders were shot down, nine of them by night fighters. Thus, the Germans lost 30 planes in 48 hours, it was claimed.

Official British circles expressed great satisfaction over the news from Washington that President Roosevelt had lifted the neutrality ban on the Red Sea and Gulf of Aden, permitting American shipping to enter those waters.

A semiofficial statement said it showed "the promptness and the effectiveness of American assistance in the cause which all the free peoples have in common" and that it was "the latest welcome sign of American determination to do everything possible to assist the cause of democracy."

Foreign observers said American ships probably would encounter some hazard in those waters, however.

Pirot, near the Bulgarian border.

As far as is known, all Americans in Yugoslavia are safe. Robert Macatee, secretary of the United States Legation, followed the Yugoslav government out of Belgrade, accompanying the American news correspondents, Robert St. John, of the Associated Press; Ray Brock, of the New York Times; Russell Hill, of the New York Herald Tribune; Cecil Brown, of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and myself.

After displaying almost superhuman heroism, the men of Yugoslavia's air force are in desperate need of replacements in machines, particularly fighters, due to the Yugoslav aviation losses wrought by Nazi bombing of airports.

Before the initial shock of the German invasion Yugoslav troops withdrew through heavy snowstorms to mountain positions where past experience had showed that military defense strategy and tactics could best be employed.

Meanwhile, a Yugoslav army in the south broke into northern Albania where the capture of the Adriatic coastal town of Lesh (Alession) from the Italians is now confirmed.

Unconfirmed reports circulated in British legation circles, traveling with the Yugoslav government, said the leading northern seaport of Durazzo also had been captured.

(The London Daily Telegraph reported the Yugoslav capture of the Albanian port of San Giovanni di Medua.)

King Exhorts Greeks

New York, April 11 (AP).—King George II of Greece in a proclamation broadcast by the Athens radio and recorded by the Columbia Broadcasting System's listening station tonight exhorted his people to greater effort in their fight against advancing German forces.

"We shall resist fiercely against the enemy raids, against the enemy machines, thus performing our supreme duty for the country faithfully." The proclamation said in part.

[The United Press reported that King Peter was understood in Rome to have flown to England.]

London Report Conflicting

London (Saturday), April 12 (AP). Reuters, the British news agency, early today quoted a Yugoslav high command communique from "somewhere in Yugoslavia" to the effect that German troops on the central front had occupied Kragujevac, 60 miles south of Belgrade.

In the north the Germans reached the River Sava and entered Zagreb without meeting resistance, the communique said.

A little earlier the Yugoslav premier, Gen. Dusan Simovic, broadcast encouragement to his soldiers from headquarters from "somewhere in Yugoslavia."

"Our troops are concentrating on main battle lines to check the enemy's advance," he said. "Germany's early successes cannot discourage us. Though the present situation is difficult, I believe the justice of our cause, the bravery of our army and the help of our powerful Allies will assure us victory."

Hungarians March In

Budapest, April 11 (U.P.).—Regent Admiral Nicholas de Horthy sent Hungarian troops marching across the border into Yugoslavia today to seize the cornfields and dairy lands which treaty-makers took from the old Austro-Hungarian empire after the last war.

Reports circulated that Rumania, like Hungary a junior partner of the Axis, had started a similar move into the southern section of the Banat area in which Hungary, Rumania and Yugoslavia form a boundary "corner."

Hungarian soldiers swarmed into the 8,718 square miles of "the richest cornfield in Europe"—called Vojvodina by the Yugoslavs—after Horthy proclaimed that "the Yugoslav state ceased to exist" and his soldiers were needed to protect the Hungarian minority from anarchy. He proclaimed a state of national emergency.

The area which Hungary is seizing is a triangular section on the northeast corner of Yugoslavia, east of the Croat section which yesterday proclaimed itself "a free state."

Croats Threaten Reprisals

Zurich, April 11 (U.P.).—The Zagreb radio broadcast a warning tonight to the Yugoslavs against mistreatment of Croats, threatening to invoke a reprisal policy of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

The announcement from the Croat capital, where Nationalists have proclaimed an independent free state, said that Serbian officers in Croat hands would be held as hostages "until further notice."

Yugoslav military authorities in those parts of Croatia still adhering to the Belgrade government were told that if their men maltreated Croats, Serbians in the "free" zone would be shot.

Deanna Gets Marriage License; 850 Invited to Star's Wedding

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

PRELUDE TO WEDDING BELLS—Deanna Durbin and Paul Vaughn get marriage license in Los Angeles

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, April 11.—Nineteen-year-old Deanna Durbin will become a bride a week from today—with 850 guests at her wedding.

She and her prospective bridegroom, Studio Executive Vaughn Paul, 25, disclosed this today when they visited the Hall of Records and took out a marriage license.

Because of the number of invited guests, Miss Durbin said, the ceremony next Friday will be at the Wilshire Methodist Episcopal Church instead of at the Hollywood home of her parents, as originally was planned.

Because of the rainstorm and couple's early appearance, only a few persons observed their visit to the Hall of Records. Deanna and Vaughn obligingly embraced for the first public pictures of a Durbin kiss.

Deanna hasn't even been given a genuine romantic role in her nine films as a singer, her studio declaring she was too young for love. She and Paul, who met when he was second assistant director on her first picture, "Three Smart Girls," became engaged December 5.

Paul proposed while they were sitting in his automobile in front of her house, Deanna said. He pinned his fraternity pin on her and they were engaged. But today she showed the cameramen a much more impressive engagement token—a large diamond ring, with half-circles of rubies set in a plain gold band.

"This is my first romance," said Deanna as her fiance, grinning sheepishly, wiped the lipstick from his mouth. "I hope it is going to be my last."

Hemisphere Bill Is Signed By Roosevelt

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a Congressional resolution stating that the United States will not recognize any transfer of territory in the Western Hemisphere from one non-American power to another and will enter immediate consultation with the other American republics if such a transfer seems likely to be attempted.

Mr. Roosevelt's action, marking this Government's formal adherence to the agreement reached by the American foreign ministers in Havana last July, came only 24 hours after announcement that the Danish colony of Greenland has been taken under the wing of the Monroe Doctrine.

The President told reporters that the other American republics had known all along about the State Department's negotiations with Danish Minister Henrik de Kauffmann for defense bases at Greenland. The agreement made public Thursday provides that the bases will be available to the armed forces of all the American nations.

Greenland is considered very definitely a part of the Western Hemisphere, Mr. Roosevelt said, giving it the same status under the Act of Havana as Martinique, Guadeloupe or British Guiana.

Hull Raps Italy In Defending Maj. Bentley

Copyright by New York Times

Secretary of State Cordell Hull paid his compliments to Italy in acid terms yesterday in defending Maj. William C. Bentley, the assistant United States military and air attache in Rome who is being recalled as persona non grata to the Italian government.

The official records show, Mr. Hull said at his press conference, that Maj. Bentley's service was highly satisfactory at all times and free from any legitimate criticism from any source.

Then he proceeded with a biting remark addressed to Italy. It would seem, he said, that some governments which are engaged in a lawless course today are very ready to resent the course of officials and governments that are pursuing a law-abiding course.

The Italian government gave no reason for declaring Maj. Bentley persona non grata and the War Department Thursday in a statement cleared him of any personal or official blame for the position in which he is placed. His recall, it is obvious, was requested in retaliation for the demand of Secretary Hull for the departure of Admiral Alberto Lais, the Italian naval attache here, for allegedly having given the order for sabotage to be committed on the Italian merchant ships in American ports.

It was not the first time Secretary Hull had handled Italy without gloves. His opposition to the regime of Premier Mussolini, in fact, goes back to the invasion of Ethiopia in 1935.

In the meantime reports continued to be received of German efforts to stir up the Mohammedans in Egypt and countries of the Middle East. They already have succeeded in Iraq, where a pro-Nazi government has seized power through a military coup d'etat and is backed by the military and the native tribes.

When Secretary Hull was asked yesterday whether the United States would recognize the new regime in Bagdad, he said he had not heard that discussed or suggested. It is not expected that recognition will be accorded.

French Youths Try to Escape To Join British

By Lansing Warren

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, April 11.—So many young Frenchmen are seeking to leave the country with the purpose of joining the forces of the Allies that the government here today announced the absolute closing of all frontiers to men of military age.

According to today's announcement young Frenchmen every day are:

Seeking to leave the coasts of Normandy and Britanny for British ports.

Arriving famished and exhausted after days of march over the mountains in Spain where they seek to take refuge with French consuls.

Seeking to escape from occupied territory and even the forbidden zone in answer to the recruiting agents of the DeGaullist forces.

Spurred by Intellectuals

In this they are being spurred on by the counsels of intellectuals, journalists, professors and politicians, the announcement says. The French government and Marshal Petain in person have been forced to intervene on behalf of students threatened by firing squads of the occupying authority it is declared.

It is learned that at the same time the line of demarcation between the occupied zone and the free zone and between the occupied zone and all foreign countries has been stringently closed to foreigners.

It is charged that the dissident radio at Brazzaville and the French language broadcasts from London have been instigating a campaign in France for support of an Allied victory. It has been revealed through the public punishments inflicted on towns and individuals that a widespread movement has been under way to chalk up the letter "V" with a Lorraine cross within it on the walls of occupied France. The significance of this symbol is victory for the faction represented by the Lorraine cross of the Gaullists.

Two Towns Fined

The town of Moulin has recently been condemned to a heavy fine for manifestations of this kind and now it is announced that a fine of 500,000 francs for similar agitation has been visited on Chalon by the occupying authorities.

Another charge is that Gaullist pamphlets have been circulated from hand to hand throughout French territory and that chain letters seek to keep alive faith and confidence in the victory of the former allies of France. Certain public demonstrations recently have seemed to give vent to sentiments beneath the surface in France and particularly since the extension of the war to Yugoslavia.

Great Allied Army Awaits Nazi Attack

By Richard D. McMillan.

United Press Staff Writer

With the British Army in the Balkans, via Athens, April 11.—One of the greatest battles ever fought on this historic front appeared developing today after preliminary skirmishes between Britain's Balkan expeditionary force and the German war machine.

A finely equipped British army at full strength threw itself across the path of battering German legions, lining up shoulder to shoulder with the Greeks in defense of this mountainous little country.

Heretofore the German attack in the Balkans has been directed mainly against the Greeks and Yugoslavs, while the British army jockeyed into position and held itself ready for the appropriate moment to join battle.

The Germans suffered heavy losses in breaking through the Greek-Yugoslav frontier posts. They appeared to face an equally stiff task in their first impact with the Allied forces entrenched and waiting for them.

For weeks before the Germans sent their gray-green legions marching across the Bulgarian frontiers against the Yugoslavs and Greeks, the British army of the Balkans had been moving into the Macedonian Mountains.

Along country roads over which dust swirled in clouds, I saw columns scores of miles long—tanks, trucks, big guns, munition supply lorries—filing day and night through the fastnesses to set up death traps for the enemy hordes.

As the land battle develops, Royal Air Force fighters and bombers keep up day and night attacks, growing ever more powerful as new bombers pour in by air.

Convoys Held Roosevelt's Responsibility

Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, yesterday declared the question of convoys, when and if needed, was "strictly for the President to determine on his own responsibility."

Bloom urged against submission of the question to Congress in event the Administration determines on any form of naval escorts for aid shipments. He said he did not know whether it would be put up to Congress, but if it was it would needlessly inspire a repetition of the isolationist fight against the lend-lease bill. Such a row, he said, would set back the Nation's defense position.

"I am not declaring for convoys," said Bloom. "I am simply saying we have voted the President all necessary power to aid Britain. Only the President can determine when and where convoys are needed, if they are needed. That isn't in our department and I couldn't imagine what such a resolution would say. We couldn't say we authorized convoys or we forbade them. The President has that power."

Some Senate Foreign Relations spokesmen take a contrary view that the President should and would submit the question to Congress if the course was deemed necessary. Pending such a decision, they believe Congress should not consider it. Meanwhile, the Tobey resolution to ban use of convoys is pending before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which is expected to defer action.

Counter-Coup Fails in Iraq

Baghdad, Iraq, April 11 (AP).—An Iraq government communique said tonight that a counter-coup, engineered by former Regent Emir Abdul Ilah and three of his followers, had been frustrated. One conspirator, the governor of Basrah, was said to have been arrested, but the others escaped by plane to R. A. F. cantonments.

Donovan Sees Threat to U. S. If Nazis Win

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 11.—Col. William J. Donovan said today that if Germany won the war America would be "in a dangerous economic position" and whatever this Nation did now "we must do it with the full realization of the danger involved, even though that danger may be war itself."

His speech, "If Hitler Wins," written for presentation before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations, said that since his recent three months' mission of observation in Europe he had the impression that in passage of the lease-lend bill the American people "had acted upon sound instincts" but that "they were not certain in their minds that danger existed."

The immediate result of a Nazi victory, he said, would be "the organization of the whole of Europe as a single entity"—self-sufficient in foodstuffs with the purpose of having a sure agricultural foundation upon which to base a firm Nazi military leadership."

But, he added, "to avoid the danger of discontent among the people upon whom it feeds, the German system of exploitation must be brought to bear on other countries across the seas," and thereby America would be placed in a dangerous economic position.

"The greatest danger," he said, "not only to our economy but to our National security, would be that which strikes indirectly through South America. . . . South America will be forced either to accept German dictation or economic ruin."

Col. Donovan said "it seems to me clear that what we should do is to act only for our own advantage. And to be stampeded by no one. . . . If it is to our advantage to declare war, we should declare war, but otherwise not; if it is to our disadvantage, to the disadvantage of our safety, to declare war, we should not declare war."

He said there were those who believe that America should not aid Britain, because they believe the war already lost, "but I tell you as a soldier and as an observer of soldiers that the war is not lost."

Army Flier Killed, 2 Hurt in Air Crash

Arms Strikes Hit New Low, Hillman Says

Sidney Hillman, cochief of the OPM, yesterday proudly pointed to the "record" low level of only 7,000 men idle due to strikes in defense industries and forecast that threats of a strike in General Motors plants would not interfere with the defense program.

Hillman told his press conference that he was "not particularly worried" about threats of a G. M. stoppage, which company officials reported yesterday as scheduled by the C. I. O auto workers union for April 20.

In an unusually hopeful mood, Hillman repeated assertions recently made on Capitol Hill that "the labor-management relationship is now the best that it has ever been in industry" and that the low number of workers on strike is "quite a record" in a time of increased profits when labor might naturally be expected to seek its share. He did not include 330,000 striking coal workers in his figures, he said, because the coal strike at no time threatened defense production.

Developments Listed

Other favorable developments which Hillman cited included:

1. Virtual elimination of "weekend blackouts" in the aviation industry, where a survey disclosed that 88 per cent of production workers were on the job six days a week; almost three-fourths of the employes were on a three-shift basis; almost half were working between 44 and 48 hours a week and where two large plants, employing one-third of all aircraft labor, were working seven days a week;

2. Growth of the industry-training program, with complete agreement by labor and management for expansion of training plans, and in some cases, with unions actually taking the initiative in demanding further enlargement in the teaching of skilled workers;

3. Announcement of Government approval of zone standards for the entire shipbuilding industry of the Pacific Coast, setting uniform wage and overtime provisions, outlawing strikes and lockouts, providing compulsory arbitration and preventing production delays on $867,000,000 in Navy and Maritime Commission orders.

Sets $1.12 Wage

The shipbuilding agreement, Hillman said, will be signed by employers and the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. unions involved. It sets a minimum wage of $1.12 an hour for skilled mechanics and is the result of labor-management conferences, supervised by Government officials, beginning on February 3.

Similar conferences will be held this month and next to frame agreements covering the east coast, Great Lakes and Gulf coast.

On the less favorable side, Hillman said he had received more than 3,000 letters last week complaining of discrimination against hiring Negroes in defense industries. As a result, he dispatched letters yesterday to all defense contractors pointing out that the OPM's interest was maximum production for which "all" available local labor resources should be used before resorting to recruitment of labor from outside home areas.

Hillman's letter warned that a skilled labor stringency threatened to become more serious in the next three months, and that "artificial factors are tending to aggravate this increasingly serious situation."

A.F.L. and C.I.O. Men Fght at Plane Plant

Seattle, April 11 (U.P.).—Police late today broke up a fight between A. F. L. and C. I. O. unionists outside the Boeing Aircraft Co. after one man suffered a broken nose.

Officials of the Aeronautical Mechanics Union (A. F. L.), which holds bargaining rights at the huge plant, said 15 men from several C. I. O. unions appeared at the grounds to distribute literature.

fled when his victim roused up and lunged toward him.

He said he walked around for a short time and then entered Mrs. Kneeland's apartment. He confessed he also beat her over the head with a stone and took her pocketbook containing about $30.

He then went to Falls Church, Va., he said. The same night, he stated, he entered a home in Falls Church, stole $34 and escaped. No report has ever been made to police of this robbery, however.

Sergt. W. H. Glenn, of the Falls Church police, said that about a year ago a youth beat Mrs. Frederick W. Wright with a hammer.

Bought New Clothing

After spending the night in Virginia, the boy declared, he returned to Washington, bought some new clothing and took a room on Vermont Avenue Northwest. He kept the room until last Tuesday when his money ran out and he began "living out."

Authorities at the National Training School granted local police permission yesterday to bring the boy to police headquarters to make a statement and to visit the scenes of the attacks.

Long said that when the boy was brought to his home yesterday by detectives, he pointed out the window through which he said he entered, and explained that he struck when he heard Long cough.

"He was entirely cool, calm and collected," Long said of the boy's reenactment of the incident. "He was the calmest person under the circumstances I could possibly imagine."

Showed No Concern

Mrs. Kneeland said she could not identify Andrew positively but that "he seemed to know an awful lot" about the attack on her. She said he showed no concern that she had been injured but "appeared shocked and sorry" when told $25 had been overlooked by the burglar.

He was returned to the institution last night.

Capt. Ira E. Keck, assistant chief of detectives, said he intended to ask Juvenile Court for custody of the suspect.

U. S. Board Settles Strike, 3 Vessels Sail

The National Defense Mediation Board yesterday settled its seventh defense strike, enabling the immediate departure of three hitherto strike-bound freighters to East African ports for vitally needed cargoes of chrome ore.

The settlement, announced by Vice Chairman William H. Davis, freed vessels of the Seas Shipping Co., tied up since March 22 in New York Harbor by striking C. I. O. marine engineers. The case was certified to the board on April 5. Solution took the form of a new one-year contract, providing for the employment of two junior engineers per ship, as demanded by the union, and for a compromise on the per cent of wage bonus while the vessels were in the East Africa run.

The board also appointed Lloyd G. Garrison, dean of the Wisconsin University Law School, as impartial referee for future management-union disputes in the Allis-Chalmers Co. The job of referee was created in the board's recent strike settlement agreement, with the provision that if the union and the company failed to agree in five days on a list of names submitted by the board, the board would select the umpire. Chairman Clarence A. Dykstra indicated that the five days had elapsed and that Garrison was the board's choice.

Other panels met yesterday to seek settlements of the Snoqualmie Falls Timber Co., Standard Tool Co., Cowles Tool Co. and Phelps-Dodge Copper Products Co. strikes, and scheduled further conferences in the coming days.

The board also dispatched telegrams to company and union officials involved in the strike at the J. Sklar Co., Long Island City, N. Y. The strike, which began April 4 when 300 C. I. O. electric, radio and machine workers sought increased wages and a renewed bargaining agreement, was certified to the board on April 9. The company manufactures surgical instruments and supplies.

Committee to Meet Monday to Fix Textile Wage Base

By the Associated Press

The first efforts toward boosting minimum wages of about 450,000 cotton textile employes will be undertaken here next week with manufacturers seeking speedy disposal of the matter.

A new 21-man industrial committee will meet Monday to determine a new minimum which the wage-hour division hopes will become effective by July.

More than 100,000 of the cotton mill workers to be affected are in the North while an additional 125,000 in the North are employed in the narrow fabrics branch of the industry, silk, rayon and linen manufacturing.

Federal officials believe a minimum of at least 36 cents an hour will be agreed upon. The present minimum is 32½ cents. Labor spokesmen seek a 40-cent minimum with some Southern interests holding out for the present rate.

Paramount Bldg. Ruined

New York, April 11 (AP).—Paramount Pictures said today that its building in Birmingham, England, was destroyed last night in German bombing of that industrial center.

One employe, Vice President John W. Hicks, jr., said, was missing and presumed dead.

Reuther Seeks Strike Vote In G. M. Plants

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 11.—Walter P. Reuther, director of the General Motors department of the United Automobile Workers-C. I. O., said today the International Union had asked union locals for authority to take a strike vote of its 175,000 members in 76 General Motors plants in the Nation.

Reuther said the strike action, if and when taken, would not include workers in defense industries.

"This is the first time on any large scale that defense workers would not go on strike," Reuther said.

Reuther declared that the General Motors Corporation during five weeks of negotiations "has repeatedly attempted to force deadlocks on questions of union recognition, in order to evade negotiations on other points."

Deadline April 20

In a letter to William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, chiefs of the Office of Production Management in Washington, Reuther said the union was demanding that the powers of an umpire previously appointed to handle grievances be broadened.

Reuther notified the corporation, he told the OPM officials, that the deadline for strike action would be April 20, "which is the end of the 60-day period provided in the U.A.W.-C.I.O. General Motors agreement."

The U.A.W. official expressed a desire to "cooperate with the OPM in making the necessary arrangements for continuing production of all defense work in the event the corporation should make it necessary for the union to strike in order to secure its just demands."

Earlier, in Washington, the Labor Department received notice of the threatened strike and immediately ordered Federal Conciliator James F. Dewey into action to avert a work stoppage.

Company Reports Deadlock

A telegram from the corporation to John R. Steelman, chief of the U. S. Conciliation Service, said:

"In the interest of national defense and in order to do everything possible to seek peaceful adjustment of disputes affecting defense program in General Motors plants that will imperil the entire program of the country because of the strategic position of General Motors operations in the defense program, and in accordance with the President's request that employers notify your service and the OPM of any dispute which threatens to result in strikes and consequent production stoppage, we hereby notify you that the U.A.W.-C.I.O. has today served notice on General Motors of intended strike action unless current negotiations result in a new agreement before April 20.

"Negotiations deadlocked on certain issues. Suggest presence of conciliator beginning tomorrow."

Expansion of U. S. Forging Capacity Deemed Vital

The Office of Production Management said last night that a conference of Government officials and steel company representatives agreed yesterday that the Nation's capacity to produce heavy forgings for ships and big guns must be "expanded considerably."

An announcement of the conference said that "any further expansion of facilities will be in addition to an expansion of heavy forgings capacity begun last fall which will cost in excess of $40,000,000.

The expansion, the OPM said, would be needed to meet increased requirements of the Army and Navy, the Maritime Commission and the lease-lend program.

Attending the meeting yesterday were representatives of the War and Navy Departments, the Maritime Commission and the OPM.

Steel Pay Rise Drive Extended To Bethlehem

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, April 11.—While the steel industry began to feel the pinch of the work stoppage in coal, the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee today broadened its drive for wage increases to include approximately 100,000 workers employed by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. The union is seeking a minimum 10-cent hourly increase for Bethlehem workers.

The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation closed its Carrie furnace at Rankin, Va., two days after banking a furnace at the Edgar Thomson works in Braddock, Pa., because of coke shortage. A corporation spokesman said that other furnaces likely would be closed unless coke deliveries are resumed.

Meanwhile, representatives of the corporation resumed contract negotiations with the S. W. O. C. after a temporary lull in which Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O. and the S. W. O. C., discussed the general labor situation with President Roosevelt. Observers expected an agreement by next week.

The raise would cover workers in Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland and West Coast mills of the Bethlehem Corporation. It was said that in addition to the basic increase adjustments ranging upward to 25 cents hourly would be sought for some workers to "level out wage rates."

By including Bethlehem in its wage drive, the union increased to 340,000 the number of workers affected.

Contract negotiations with Carnegie-Illinois Steel cover 240,000 wage earners in the United States Steel Corporation's far-flung system.

The National Steel Corporation already has granted its 20,000 workers a 10-cent increase. Several smaller companies followed suit.

Ford Truce Sends 200,000 Back to Work

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 11.—Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner announced today settlement of the ten-day strike at the Ford Motor Co.'s Rouge plant and termed it "an historic step in establishing industrial peace in our country."

Plans were being made for reopening the Rouge plant, world's largest industrial unit, on Monday.

"The Ford Motor Co. and the U. A. W.-C. I. O. officials have set an example for the Nation in their willingness to meet around the conference table to give and take and to make possible this settlement," Van Wagoner said.

Announcement that an agreement had been reached came a day after the Governor made a public appeal for both sides to accept his compromise plan in the interest of national defense.

The company has $155,000,000 in defense contracts, mostly for bomber assemblies, airplane engines and small Army trucks called "blitz buggies."

200,000 Have Been Idle

Around 200,000 Ford workers and employes in associated industries in 41 States have been idle because of the shutdown of the Rouge plant in suburban Dearborn, main cog in the giant Ford industrial machine. This factory alone employs 85,000 hourly rated workers.

I. A. Capizzi, chief Ford counsel, said:

"We have declared a truce and are going back to work. We feel that our vital part in national defense is more important than any other consideration.

"Now let us put our shoulder to the wheel and prove that American democracy is equal to any emergency."

It was the first time since the company was founded 38 years ago that it has negotiated directly with officers of any union regarding contractual relations and working conditions. It was also the first strike ever called in any Michigan plant of the Ford company.

NLRB Delays Hearing

R. J. Thomas, president of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., said the major significance of the strike was that "the last remaining nonunion citadel in the automotive industry has fallen."

James F. Dewey, Federal labor conciliator, said that early today the National Labor Relations Board consented to postpone a hearing, scheduled for Monday, on a complaint by the U. A. W.-C. I. O. Postponement of this hearing was one condition of the company's acceptance of the Governor's peace formula and was the last obstacle in the way of an agreement.

The three-point plan agreed upon calls for all employes to return to their jobs without discrimination, the reestablishment of grievance procedure used before the strike and cooperation of both sides in holding the election.

When the strike was called, after the union charged that the company had discharged eight men active in the union, the U. A. W.-C. I. O. demanded a 10-cent hourly wage increase, a contractual agreement and substitution of uniformed protection men for the Ford service department.

Justice Hughes Has Nothing to Say On 79th Birthday

By the Associated Press

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, whose vitality and keen sense of humor belie his age, reached his seventy-ninth birthday anniversary yesterday.

The white-bearded jurist, who has presided over the Supreme Court for more than 11 years, preferred to overlook the occasion. He told newspapermen he had nothing to say.

Apparently he still adheres to the philosophy of a remark he made a few years ago that he was "going along without reference to the calendar."

The Chief Justice appears to be in good health, and he has not missed a day from his court duties since the term began last October. He keeps the business of the tribunal moving with dispatch and, at times, he enlivens the proceedings with flashes of humor which surprise spectators who had regarded him as stern and austere.

Southerners Walk Out on Mine Parley

By the Associated Press

New York, April 11.—Southern operators bolted the Appalachian wage conference today in a dispute over terms of a new contract covering 325,000 soft coal miners and a few hours later announced creation of a new negotiating body of their own.

Ebersole Gaines, of Mount Hope, W. Va., was elected head of the new organization, to be known as the Southern Coal Operators Wage Conference.

He said the Southern group would renew an offer to grant the miners a wage increase of approximately 11 per cent and to continue negotiations with the United Mine Workers of America (C. I. O.) to adjust all differences.

Insist on Differential

The Southerns' withdrawal from the eight-State conference followed their refusal to accede to a union demand for a $1.40 increase in the basic daily wage which would eliminate an existing 40-cent North-South differential.

Gaines said the Southerners bolted the conference because it was making "no progress" toward reopening the Nation's bituminous mines, now closed 11 days.

The break in the conference's ranks precipitated these charges:

By Charles O'Neill, New York, head of the United Eastern Coal Sale Corporation: "The conference is being sabotaged by several well-known Southern operators."

By John L. Lewis, president of the U. M. W. A.: "This amounts to brazen conspiracy."

150,000 Miners Affected

Hugh W. H. Koepler, executive secretary of the Pocahontas Tug River Coal Operators Association, who was spokesman for the Southerners, made public a letter to Ezra Van Horn, Cleveland coal executive and permanent chairman of the joint conference, saying the conference was "terminated." There are approximately 150,000 miners in the Southern Appalachian fields.

Notice of the withdrawal was sent by Koepler to Lewis with a copy of the letter to Van Horn. The notice read: "Since you have repeatedly stated to the negotiators that your proposals to them will not be changed, we are advising that we are requesting consideration by the National (Defense Mediation) Board."

O'Neill said he spoke for the Northern producers in stating that the Southern representatives withdrew "in order that they may retain in its whole great amount differentials between wages and other considerations they have in their favor as against the Northern producers."

Steelman to Report

Dr. John R. Steelman, Federal conciliator, said the conference would be recessed until 2 p. m. (Eastern standard time) Monday, and that meanwhile he would make a complete report to Washington.

Lewis, in a statement, indicated that the union would not sign a contract until all producers had agreed to the terms.

"This (the Southerners' bolt) means more chaotic conditions and an absurd situation," Lewis said.

"Acute Danger," Says Lewis

Asked whether there was any immediate danger of a coal shortage, Lewis replied: "A very acute danger exists and will begin to show next week, due to the shortage of coke, a coal product. Additional blast furnaces will have to be banked because of that shortage."

In his statement branding "several well-known Southern operators" guilty of sabotage, O'Neill declared that the position of the Northern producers "is that they will pay the same rate of pay as the Southern operators and not one cent more."

Skies to Smile on Blossoms and Easter

have an opportunity to view a repeat performance of the festival pageant. All events, with exception of the actual crowning of Queen Nancy, will be given a second showing.

Just before the coronation, the Queen will sail across the Tidal Basin aboard a white barge escorted by a Red Cross Life Saving Corps from Woodrow Wilson High School in pedal boats.

At a specially constructed wharf at the seawall, she will be greeted by Commissioner John Russell Young, Thomas P. Morgan, jr., chairman of the coronation committee, and Edgar Morris, general chairman of the festivities.

Queen Nancy's princesses, each escorted by a uniformed officer of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, will form an aisle beneath the trees on her passage to the throne.

On the arm of Capt. Chester Hammond, U. S. A., assigned to the War Department, Munitions Building, the titian-haired Queen will mount the six steps to her seat of honor.

Marine Band to Play

The pageant will be enacted to music by the United States Marine Band under the direction of Henry Weber, second leader.

Then will follow singing of the 1941 Chery Blossom theme song, "Cherry Blossom Time," written by Gene Ford, local theater man. Bob Ellis will be soloist accompanied by an ensemble of the Columbia Light Opera Company.

The Tidal Basin pageant will conclude with the presentation of an operett, "Music and Blossoms," by the opera company under the direction of Ethyl Manning.

The next highlight on the program will be a retreat parade at the olo Grounds by the Twelfth Infantry, Arlington Cantonment. This is scheduled for 4 p. m.

The day's activities will wind up with a grand Cherry Blossom Ball at 9 p. m. in Uline's Arena, Third and M Streets Northeast, Queen Nancy, her court and their escorts, District, Congressional and Government leaders will be in attendance.

It appeared last night that the world-famous beauty of the Cherry Blossoms might be dimmed by the array of beautiful girls assembled for the festival.

Latest to arrive as guest of the arrangements committee is Miss Alice Beasley, 20, of Memphis, Tenn., the South's 1941 "Maid of Cotton." Miss Beasley, a vivacious red-head, is on an air tour of 32 cities in the interest of the cotton industry. She was selected from among 138 candidates for the title. She received a special invitation to come here for the blossom celebration.

Extra Police Detailed

To care for the anticipated influx of week-end visitors, special plans for traffic and public transportation facilities have been made.

Extra details of both Metropolitan and Park police will be on the streets today and tomorrow and the Capital Transit Co. will augment its Potomac Park and Fourteenth Street bus and streetcar service.

President E. D. Merrill of the transit company, announced that Fourteenth Street cars on both days will run at intervals of 3 minutes beginning at noon. Some 15 extra street cars and 10 buses will be used to service the festival area.

Hotel and private room space was at a premium last night. The Board of Trade reported its housing office was swamped with requests for lodgings throughout yesterday. So far, it was announced, all requests have been filled.

Although the trade board housing group still has available private room listings, hotels reported capacity reservations.

Many Driving In

Railroads and interstate bus companies said travel was heavy and is expected to reach a peak this morning. However, it appeared that most visitors are coming in their own automobiles. The American Automobile Association has been pressed with demands for travel information, it was announced.

The promise of cloudless skies and mild temperatures is expected to attract one of the largest Easter church-going crowds in the city's history. Houses of worship throughout the city are preparing for record turnouts.

There is a small chance that Monday may not be as fair, the Weather Bureau said, but preparations for the egg-rolling on the White House lawn have been completed.

The east and west gates to the President's "back yard" will open as usual at 9 a. m. The same regulations will be in effect—only adults accompanied by a youngster 12 years old or younger, will be permitted entrance until after 3 p. m.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who has invited a group of British refugee children to the ceremonies, will not attend herself. The White House announced she would be in Los Angeles Monday to attend the wedding of her son James to Miss Romelle Schneider, hi former nurse.

Mrs. Henry Wallace, wife of the Vice President, will be the hostess. The President is expected to make a brief appearance.

Belgian Resistance On Increase, Gutt Tells Roosevelt

Copyright by New York Times

Camille Gutt, minister of war and finance in the Belgian government in London, called on President Roosevelt yesterday and told him that the moral resistance of the Belgians to the German army of occupation is "stiffening more each month."

The cabinet officer, who is in this country in connection with the legal action against the Vichy government to recover $260,000,000 in gold sent to Paris for safe keeping, then taken to Dakar in Africa, and finally turned over by the French to the Germans, was presented by Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, the Belgian Ambassador.

The Belgians, Gutt said, were "anti-German to the core."

"They don't want to cooperate with the Germans," he added. "They are glad even when the British bombers come over, and acts of sabotage are increasing every month."

Hotels Great... Visitors With S. R. O. Signs

Washington hotels last night hung out the S. R. O signs and the problem of housing an anticipated influx of 200,000 cherry blossom and Easter week-end visitors was definitely acute.

Hotel men the city over reported capacity bookings. Even hostelries in outlaying sections said they couldn't handle "another person."

The Washington Tourist Camp said it was "completely filled" and couldn't park another trailer. It appeared that the situation would not be relieved until Monday when the week-end visitors begin to check out.

But, on the other hand, the Washington Board of Trade housing committee announced that "ample space" was available in private homes, rooming houses and tourist establishments.

Although unable to state the exact number of rooms available, a committee spokesman said all who applied for sleepnig space could be taken care of.

The comm'ttee was swamped with room demands yesterday, but said that "everyone was fixed up."

Hagerstown Gets Overflow

Persons who preferred hotel accommodations were being turned away in droves. It was reported that space even in Baltimore was at a premium. And some persons, according to hotel reports, went as far away as Hagerstown, Md. to get sleeping space.

The George Mason Hotel in Alexandria was booked solid for the weekend and few rooms were available in tourist homes.

"Well," observed one hotel man, "it is nice weather—maybe they can sleep in the parks."

1,500 Rooms Registered With Defense Group

More than 1,500 rooms have been registered with the Housing Committee of the District of Columbia Defense Council since it set up the room inspection office a month ago. They are now coming in at the rate of 100 a day, according to Miss Saida Hartman, who is giving full time volunteer service as supervisor at the committee's headquarters, 458 Indiana Avenue.

Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, director of the Washington Housing Association, is also director of room inspection. The work is inspecting all rooms registered is being carried on by 150 volunteers from women's organizations who are giving from 3 to 8 consecutive hours a week. They are from the Junior League, League of Women Voters, Catholic Charities, Jewish Community Center, American Women's Voluntary Services, Council of Church Women, District Federation of Women's Clubs, Women of the Moose, Home Economics Association, the Southern Democratic Women's Club and from the Urban League, which is inspecting rooms in the colored section.

The volunteer inspectors were given an intensive course of training before being sent out. They fill out an inspection card and have done intelligent and efficient work, according to Miss Hartman.

Rooms in the central city are inspected within approximately 48 hours after they are registered, according to Miss Hartman, but those in the outlying areas may not be reached for a week. Often rooms are rented before the inspector arrives. Of those listed, 500 have been passed and about 50 rejected. In case of rejection, the only penalty is that they are not listed; unless conditions are found to be so bad as to warrant reporting to the Health Department. In some places, it was reported, for instance, cots have been put in the basement, bathtubs installed in the basement dining room and showers in the furnace room.

More volunteer chauffeurs are needed to take the women on their inspection tours, Miss Hartman said. Some women, qualified to inspect, do not drive.

Plenty of rooms are available in outlying districts of the city, she said, but many are reluctant to take them because of inconveni nt transportation.

Both she and Mrs. Hoffman emphasized the great need of recreational enters for the yong people coming into the city. Facilities of the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A. and Jewish Community Center already are taxed, they pointed out, and it is imperative that other organizations in the city, including the churches, help meet the problem.

From Arlington's slopes and from flower-trimmed churches the message of the Resurrection will be given tomorrow as Easter is celebrated throughout the Christian world.

Worshipers will hear the traditional story in song, pageantry and sermons keyed to the victory-over-death theme, and will join in the triumphant allelulias.

Heading the city's Easter worshipers undoubtedly will be President Roosevelt, who, White House attaches said yesterday, was "hopeful of attending" services at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, Eighteenth and Church Streets Northwest.

Principal sunrise services will be held at the Arlington National Cemetery Amphitheater at 7:30 a. m. under the auspices of the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar of the United States. Palmer, grand chaplain of the Grand Lodge of F. A. A. M. of the District of Columbia.

The sermon will be delivered by the Right Rev. Adna Wright Leonard, Bishop of the Washington area of the Methodist Church.

At the conclusion of the services a cross of lilies, 5 feet in height, will be placed at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in the name of Knights Templar of the United States.

The only outdoor Easter Sunrise Service in the metropolitan Washington area at the exact moment of dawn, 5:34 a. m., will be held on the heights above Fort Lincoln Cemetery at Bladensburg Road and the District line.

Featured in the service will be the singing of the Lord's Prayer by Fague Springman, well-known artist of radio and the concert stage. An Easter message, "The Dawn of the New Day," will be delivered by the Rev. Robert L. Whittenburg, chaplain of The Little Church of Fort Lincoln, and there will be community singing by the congregation.

The service will be amplified, so that it may be heard from parked automobiles in case of adverse weather conditions. Space is available for over 5,000 cars and special Capital Transit facilities have been arranged for this early hour.

Young people of Columbia Heights, Fifteenth Street and National City Christian churches, also have arranged sunrise rites.

Hundreds of people are expected to attend final showings of Cecil B. DeMille's "King of Kings" at First Congregational Church at 3, 5:30 and 8 p. m. on Easter. Several thousand have seen it during the week.

First In Safety

The District has received the accolade of the National Safety Council for its traffic record in 1940. On the basis of low death rate, accident-reporting systems, traffic engineering and enforcement, child-safety programs and public education, Washington was judged to have led all other cities with populations of 500,000 or more. That the District could achieve this with the limited police personnel it has been able to wring from Congress is almost miraculous. No doubt a large part of the credit is due to the trained accident-prevention unit set up last year with Arthur E. Miller at its head, and the District is to be congratulated further on its good sense in placing this expert over all traffic-control work. If he is to preserve the Capital's fine record, however, it is imperative that our foster government increase his force to meet the demands of a rapidly growing city.

Price Control

It is to be hoped that the report is well founded that a price-control agency will shortly be set up by executive order to take over the functions of the existing Price Stabilization Division headed by Leon Henderson and the Consumer Division whose chief is Harriet Elliott. So far direct fixing of prices has been limited to a few strategic defense materials for which schedules of maximum prices have been set. In most cases Mr. Henderson has enlisted the voluntary cooperation of defense industries in plans for stabilizing prices, "cracking down" only when persuasion has proved unavailing. Both his organization and the Consumer Division have relied upon the weapon of publicity to bring reluctant cooperators into line and assure public support for their own efforts. However, with unmistakable signs of a general price rise beginning to cause uneasiness, the time has come to establish a stronger and more extensive system of control over prices.

Halfway measures may succeed for a time in preventing unwarranted price increases arising from temporary bottlenecks in the defense program which are caused by shortages of strategic materials. But in the long run it is impossible to keep down prices of producers' goods needed for defense purposes, if prices of nondefense consumers' goods are permitted to rise. For the various parts of the price structure are closely interrelated. The prices paid for food, clothing etc., cannot rise far without bringing demands for higher wages, and higher wages entail increased production costs for defense industries.

Thus the new price-control agency, aided by threats of punitive action against recalcitrants, will doubtless be able to act much more effectively to suppress profiteering. However, the public should realize that a price-fixing agency relying upon nonmonetary control methods to achieve its objectives is not in a position to stave off a general inflationary price rise, unless—God forbid—we embark upon full-fledged totalitarianism. For effective price control we cannot depend entirely upon machinery for dealing with special cases. We must also follow fiscal and monetary policies that provide protection against the excessive expansion and unwise utilization of money and credit.

Fitting The Crime

Another step has been taken to strengthen the hand of the courts against drivers who cause fatalities on the District's streets. Last fall the liabilities of offending motorists were extended into the area of crime beyond manslaughter when a District court jury convicted a driver of second-degree murder. Now the United States Court of Appeals has upheld the Negligent Homicide Act, which was designed to bridge the gap between reckless driving and manslaughter. Reckless driving, with a penalty of $100 fine and imprisonment up to 30 days, is considered too mild a charge for many cases involving deaths. Manslaughter, however, carries a maximum prison sentence of 15 years. This is too severe in many instances, and juries may hesitate to convict. The Negligent Homicide Act permits a maximum punishment of $1,000 fine and a year in jail for "any person who, by the operation of any vehicle at an immoderate rate of speed or in a careless, reckless, or negligent manner, but not willfully or wantonly, shall cause the death of another . . ." Police Judge Walter J. Casey held that higher courts than his should decide whether an information framed in the language of the act was specific enough to permit preparation of an adequate defense. The appellate court's answer is that the language is specific enough to inform the defendant and to satisfy constitutional requirements. So now the Police Court can proceed on firm ground to try some 20 cases which were held up pending the decision.

Work Resumed

Settlement of the Ford strike confirms the growing belief that the crisis resulting from labor stoppages in defense plants is passing. Even before Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner announced the agreement between the Ford company and the United Automobile Workers, Undersecretary of War Patterson had said that strikes affecting Army orders are fewer than at any time since early February. The settlement of the prolonged Allis-Chalmers dispute by the National Defense Mediation Board a week ago appears to have been a good omen. At any rate, the outlook for uninterrupted production of war materials during the critical 100 days to come (in John D. Biggers' words) is brighter than at any time in recent weeks.

The Ford agreement has a significance aside from the facts that it will stop a loss in wages estimated at $900,000 a day and bring about a resumption of work on vast defense orders. Departing from a policy of not dealing with unions, officials of the company have actively negotiated with the U. A. W. Moreover, the central point in the agreement appears to be the pledge of both the company and union to expedite the forthcoming NLRB election to designate collective bargaining representatives of the employes. The mere fact that collective bargaining is thus to be established through orderly means in Mr. Ford's industrial empire should help to quiet the unrest which has produced a number of walkouts in recent weeks.

Collective bargaining between employers and employes is required by the law of the land. Until machinery through which working men can exercise this right has been set up, difficulties are almost certain to arise. The NLRB is to be commended for hastening elections in plants where the conference-table method of settling labor disputes has not yet taken root. When cooperation by employers is also forthcoming, the hope for smooth industrial relations in this period of international crisis will be greatly strengthened. Of course, the organizational strike is only one cause of the recent delays in defense production. But it is a very important cause, and disputes of this character are particularly difficult to settle. Federal mediators who are now doing excellent work in spite of handicaps will have a much better chance to end and even prevent walkouts when the conference-table technique comes to be a generally accepted pattern.

The good news from Detroit was offset to some extent by the warning that a strike will be called in the General Motors plants if a new contract has not been negotiated by April 20. But one salutary fact stands out from this situation. The union has given notice of its intention to strike, and that notice has been passed along by the company to the Conciliation Service. At least Federal mediators will have an opportunity to explore the controversy and try to devise a settlement before the walkout takes effect. Apparently both employers and employes are beginning to see more clearly their responsibility for keeping the Nation's defense industries in full operation, as President Roosevelt recently enjoined them.

Spotlight On Planning

The National Resources Planning Board has focused a spotlight on local problems. A preliminary report on regional planning discloses that "no part of the country has suffered more from lack of planned development, nor is in greater need of planning for the future," than the Middle Atlantic region, which includes the District of Columbia. The board reports that it is doubtful whether there is a city in the region which is not afflicted with urban blight. As a matter of fact, haphazard growth has encouraged the development of slums, snarled transportation, made difficult and costly the provision of municipal services, polluted the streams, cut off adequate facilities for recreation, and diminished the chances of the inhabitants to lead healthful, happy and useful lives.

Not all that the board has to report is bad, however. All of the Middle Atlantic States except Delaware have planning boards, which have been making some progress toward orderly, healthful and economical development and readjustment. Locally the National Capital and Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commissions have done much to guide urban growth, and the Virginia State Planning Board, besides doing some excellent work in its own bailiwick, has made a beginning toward cooperation. An interstate compact to combat pollution in the Potomac basin is in process of conclusion.

But planning alone is not enough. The sound development of this crowded region can go ahead only if, in the words of the Resources Board, coordinated planning is "geared into the administrative structure at all levels of Government." The gears broke here in one recent instance, after Congress neglected a carefully planned program of land acquisition. Legislators then encouraged an administrative agency to project a number of Federal office buildings in an area of Maryland where the ability to establish proper zoning and other controls was doubtful. This lapse resulted essentially from the lack of a clear understanding of the Park and Planning Commission's duties and authorities. It is all-important that the jurisdiction of the planning body be defined and strengthened—if necessary, by an amendment to the act which set it up. The District and the five adjoining Maryland and Virginia counties experienced a population growth of 43 per cent in the last decade, and the rapid increase is still in progress. The overwhelming problems posed by this expansion cannot be solved in confusion.

Shadow Of Olympus

The British forces in Greece are now reported to have come to grips with the Nazis in the vicinity of the venerable and storied Mount Olympus, the "abode of the gods that stands fast forever." Since the battle beneath Olympus is said to be fierce and bloody, the noise of it may be great enough to rouse the gods from their sleep of these 20 centuries and more. So let us imagine the immortal gods rubbing their eyes, stretching, yawning and then peering down from their rose-clouded bastions to take in the situation. What will they do then? Will they, as was their habit when the world was young, take sides? Or will they, angered at the effrontery of the impious men who have disturbed their divine slumbers, throw down a few plagues and other calamities impartially on both the armies struggling beneath? (Tacitus, after brooding on the wars and convulsions of his own time, concluded that "the gods take no thought for our happiness, but only for our punishment.") Or will the Olympians simply stop their divine ears as best they can and ignore this latest example of the madness of mortals?

It is difficult to see how the gods can ignore a battle that is raging, so to speak, under their very noses. The Plain of Troy is much farther away from Olympus than Yugoslavia or even Albania, yet we know very well with what earnest attention the gods followed the struggle for Troy so many thousand years ago. Indeed, it is precisely because the gods were interested, and even excited about it, that the siege of Troy is famous even to this day. It began merely over a woman who, though beautiful, must have been well along into middle age by the time it was all over. But the gods, for their own reasons, considered it important. Unfortunately they were not unanimous about the merits of the respective sides. If we can trust the Homeric account, the line-up on Olympus was about as follows:

Pro-Greek: Thetis, Athena, Poseidon and Hephaestus.

Pro-Trojan: Apollo, Ares, Artemis, Leto and Aphrodite.

This was a pretty even division of influence, and the ultimate outcome had to be decided by Zeus himself. One way of explaining the division is that some of the pro-Trojan gods and goddesses were probably of Minoan-Mycenaean origin, and that Troy may have been the last stronghold of the prehistoric Aegean civilization. Other pro-Trojan goddesses may have been of Hittite origin, and the Hittites, under some other name, may have been among the Trojan allies mentioned in "The Iliad." But, however all that may be, the gods have now been in Greece long enough to be thoroughly naturalized. And so, considering how the Nazis, along with everything else, have mobilized the spirits of Thor and Wotan, it would seem that the least the Olympian gods can do at this point is to give the Greeks and their friends a hand.

R. J.

I have heard his voice;
I have seen his quiet face.
Voice and face have led me into a strange country
Where crags tower flamewise,
Where above the rock, hawks cry
In the loneliness of waves and seawinds.

Hereafter, I shall walk unseen beside him
On the gray beaches.
Through his eyes, I shall look beyond the red sword of sunset
And discern a free and happy people,
A brotherhood born out of violence.

Oh, return to your wilderness, Prophet and Seer;
To the passionate peace of your mountains
And your sea's desolate splendor.

Oh, Mr. Announcer, harsh vibration-bouncer, why talk and pronounce "like" you do? Why not consult "Pfyfe" and settle the strife "among" Mr. Webster and you? Why harass and harass our ears with "ha-rass?" If you won't say harass, why not "em-barrass?" Why don't you encompass, and not "encompass?" Oh, why insist on driving us mad by calling that Yugoslav city "Belgrad?" You never would think to say "spad" for spade—then why "Belgrad," when you mean Belgrade? It is true that thermometer rhymes with "kilom-eter;" but "kilometer" does not exist. If you doubt, buy a "Pfyfe," and then have your wife tie a meter of twine to your wrist! Of Convoys

Convoys mean war! Yet those very men who say they want to keep America out of war are for convoys. If these men want war, why don't they have the courage to say so openly instead of trying to get us in the war by the back door? The reason is that the American people are against war and they know it. Those Americans who have fought to keep us from entering the war by the front door should now fight to keep us from entering by the back way.

Both Sides

Walter Lippmann begs the question neatly in his column Thursday, "Everybody's Business and Nobody's," when he says, in effect, to the general public . . . "Don't bother about labor-capital disputes. You'll never be able to understand them, and besides, there's nothing you can do about them anyhow."

He proceeds to prove this point by quoting Mrs. Roosevelt, who said she knows all the facts about a few strikes, but not about them all, and urges the average citizen to take steps to find out both sides of the question before deciding who is right.

Lippmann says we can't do it. It takes a mediation board, he says, 24 hours to dig to the bottom of just one strike. Why even Mrs. Roosevelt herself cannot weigh and judge every industrial dispute, and the rest of us certainly cannot.

Maybe so, but there is one aid to understanding that he has overlooked. We common people get one side in detail and great clarity from the daily press. That's usually the employer's side, because a reporter is always invited into the main office and given the "whole story" along with a lunch or a drink.

Outside, on the curb, is the other story, labor's side. The reporter probably gets it, but I suspect our press is not always willing to print it. But we can get it, and then we have both sides.

Mrs. Roosevelt is right. We should keep our mouths shut until we have made at least an effort to get both sides. TWO-SIDER.

Appeal To Unreason

We sincerely hope that the lady or gentleman, whichever the case may be, that was operating a dark sedan in front of 5205 Twenty-sixth Street N., Arlington, Va., on Sunday, March 30, 1941, at about 11:30 a. m., and with that automobile struck and killed our little dog, Billie, and who never even had the common courtesy to stop and make inquiries about him or offer any assistance at all, we sincerely hope this person's conscience, if he has such a thing as a conscience, did not or does not bother him. We would not want him to feel badly about killing our dog, but we think the least he could have done would have been to stop. We hardly think that this person could have ever owned a dog, and if, by chance, he did, we wonder how he would feel if he lost him.

We also wonder whether, if this had been a little child instead of a little dog, would this person have stopped and offered it aid or would he have left it there to die?

We further hope that if the guilty party reads this letter, that he will realize and absorb the full significance of it.

Jitterbugs In Army?

As an old Army woman I protest the jitterbug, short-skirted, utterly disgusting females prancing about in a parade of our soldiers as an insult to noble men enlisted for the protection of our country.

If it is considered necessary to have girls in a military parade, why not train them to march in orderly rank, singing inspiring and ennobling songs? Look at the nurses, they were an honor and an inspiration to the men they serve.

Mark Sullivan, Mr. Willkie And The Republican Party

Mr. Mark Sullivan's article in The Post of Sunday, April 6, presents a very unfavorable contrast to his usual clear logic and accuracy, in its attempt to detract from Mr. Willkie's leadership.

To compare the "ritual" and "tenets" of a political party with those of a religious faith does indeed "take a lot of imagining." Where the tenets of a religious faith are based on its fundamental conception of eternal values, the policies—if not the basic principles—of a political party must perforce alter with changing circumstances. Nor was the example of the religious apostate even remotely "the equivalent" in the world of religion, to the case of Mr. Willkie and the Republican Party in the world of politics. Mr. Sullivan's analogy is the "far-fetched fantasy."

It is true that Mr. Willkie changed his party, but not his convictions. His own position has been consistent from the beginning, whereas nothing could have undergone a greater change than has the Democratic Party in the hands of the New Dealers. If any "tenet" could be ascribed to a particular party it is that of States' rights to the Democratic Party, but today it belongs to the Republican Party.

The foreign policy of this country never should be, and rarely, if ever, has been a partisan consideration. Isolationism has not been the historical policy of the Republican Party. One of the most influential reasons for Mr. Willkie's nomination by the Republican convention was that he was the only candidate who had not taken an isolationist position. I, though only an alternate to that convention, can assure Mr. Sullivan that the "initiative and spontaneous free will" which literally forced Mr. Willkie's nomination came from the people back home whom we represented.

Without making any exception for it as a question of foreign policy, Mr. Sullivan attacks Mr. Willkie's support of the lease-lend bill as "an extraordinary thing," because it was the "currently most important policy of his former Democratic associates" and that therefore, in spite of the fact that "a majority of Republicans approved . . . there arose doubt about the wisdom of having given the Presidential nomination to so recent a convert."

Admitting, as Mr. Sullivan does, that Mr. Willkie's endorsement of the lease-lend bill is not regarded by many as a party offense, because "Republican disquiet evidenced not so much dissent about the aim of the bill as a feeling that Mr. Willkie's action left the party without an opposition position—without a leader under whom to function in the role an opposition is expected to fill," leads one to conclude that Mr. Sullivan's idea of the role of an opposition party is one that opposes just to oppose, whereas his definition that "the role of opposition party is sometimes one of head-on resistance, sometimes one of constructive criticism, seeking elimination of some details of a measure and the perfecting of others" is borne out by Mr. Willkie's constructive suggestion as to modifications to the lease-lend bill and also by the debate in Congress.

Mr. Sullivan gives us a new definition of news: "Perhaps the most important news that arose in America in the last three weeks" was "a thing that did not happen"—and Mr. Sullivan then tells us that the thing that did not happen was that when the President delivered a speech about the war on March 15, Mr. Willkie did not "counter it . . . with opposition or qualification or what not" as is customary for a leader of the opposition to do. This is the single example of a "lapse from party ritual" which Mr. Sullivan gives in support of his argument, and it is based on lack of information. Here is where Mr. Sullivan must have been so absorbed in imagining what "did not happen" that he failed to note what did. Mr. Willkie was at the dinner at which the President made the speech and, after listening to it, wrote the following comment on the back of a menu card:

The President enumerated well the aspirations of America. If he could now bring himself to delegate authority to a real defense commission, his objectives would shortly be on the way to accomplishment. The real need now is organization and work carried on in the spirit of national unity without partisan or political advantage to any person or group.

Congress and the people have placed the responsibility with the President. Appropriations alone will not do the job. We all pray he meets the opportunity of becoming the greatest statesman of his generation, for he must be such if democracy is to be saved.

This was carried by the press the next morning at the same time as the President's speech. Mr. Sullivan evidently does not realize the swiftness of Mr. Willkie's mental processes and was so slow to look for an answer to the President that his own mistaken comment did not appear for 20 days.

The Republican Party should gain in strength if it continues to lack the sort of leadership which opposes merely for opposition's sake—and it is to be hoped that those doubting Thomases, to whom Mr. Sullivan refers, will end by appreciating as greatly as do the rank and file of the party, the quality of fearless and wise leadership shown by the party's most outstanding and welcome convert—Mr. Wendell Willkie.

The Post Impressionist

The Last Pioneer

They live on the side streets of small towns and in the untraveled corners of the cities. You see them, alone in the movies, or together in tea rooms, spinning the luncheon hour into the afternoon. They quilt at the church around the corner and they play bridge at weekly evening parties.

Concerning them, the third-rate poets have wept crocodile tears and the followers of Freud have drawn conclusions that are not flattering. They are of a past generation, the widowed and the mothers who are secretly puzzled by their children.

Mrs. Paisley is one of them. That is not her name, but she is a real person. There has been enough sadness in Mrs. Paisley's life to make happiness a treasured emotion. In the beginning her happiness was in the soil on which six generations had found a living in the Middle West. It was transferred to a women's college in the East from which she emerged a woman of wit and beauty.

She married a businessman in the West and they had three children. Her husband prospered. And he failed. He failed when many men were ruined. But he did not go down fighting; he went down under a cloud from which he was released by death. She fought and from the wreckage of her husband's fortune found enough to send the children East to school.

Mrs. Paisley came East and worked until the children had completed their educations. They scattered in the cities of the East to weave their own patterns of life, and Mrs. Paisley was alone. The future of a small apartment on a side street and the companionship of a few women like herself loomed for Mrs. Paisley then. And she did not like it.

One morning in spring she got in her car and started out on the search. She wandered from Cape Cod to the Finger Lakes of New York State, and from Great South Bay on Long Island to the hills of Vermont.

Her search ended on the southern tier of New York State where the Appalachians dip to the Hudson and the long green valleys finger south from the Catskills. The house sets at the head of a narrow valley, 5 miles from a small town. When she found it, the yard was overgrown with weeds and the orchard grew in unpruned luxury. Many of the window panes were broken, but the house was strong with the strength of weathered beams 150 years old. The walls were paneled in the taste of men who had confidence in the soil from which they earned their living.

"I'm going to live here," said Mrs. Paisley.

"But you can't live here alone, Mother," protested one of her children.

"Why not?" asked Mrs. Paisley.

"Well, because — because — what about winter when the snow drifts and there are fires to keep up, and what will you do? How will you spend your time?"

Mrs. Paisley knelt by a weed-choked flower plot. She rubbed earth between her fingers. "It's good soil for growing things, Buddy," she said. It was an unusually dramatic gesture for her. She rose, slightly flushed in embarrassment. "Besides," she said gaily, "there are about 500 books I've always wanted to read, and I'm going to have every one of them. I can have built-in cases on either side of the fireplace in the living room . . ."

There are nearly 100 acres of Mrs. Paisley's land. It's good land. She tested it in all sections herself, and she knows rich soil. It slopes upward from a stream to a height of land flanked by spruce and birch and maple. On the ridge is a deserted iron mine of Revolutionary days. There are two wells, a barn and outbuildings.

Mrs. Paisley has started with a vegetable garden. She looks forward to buying a cow. She has overcome her desire to have chickens because she can't go off for a few days to see the children or to New York to the theater if she must feed her hens at sundown and sunup.

"I'm too practical to start being a farmer now," she says. "But the land is always there and I know how to support myself on it if it becomes necessary. A lot of people know more than I do about what's going to happen to money and investments in the next few years. They can take everything from me, but they can't take the land."

So she pulled on a pair of slacks and a sweater and she bundled her thick graying hair into a nob and she went to work. She found Horace. That's not his name. He has an unpronounceable Polish name, so she called him Horace because she says he's sincere and looks like somebody who ought to be called Hôrace.

There is Renfrew, the Great Dane, who will pin you to the floor if you slap her on the back in jest. There is a cat named Voltaire who sleeps before the fire beside Renfrew.

Running water and electricity have been put in. Horace walks a mile to the farm every day and does the heavy work. Mrs. Paisley goes walking and digs in the garden and reads all those books that grow in numbers instead of decreasing.

When one of her children visited Mrs. Paisley this spring, he found her in the yard in slacks staring at the barn. She was so preoccupied with the barn, she was scarcely surprised by an unexpected visitor.

"It's got to be moved," she said.

"What has?"

"The barn," she replied, and laughed. "I don't know what to do with it."

"Tear it down."

"Oh, no." She looked shocked. "Nothing is going to be torn down."

"Then why move it?"

"It spoils the view," she said. "If the barn's moved I can sit by the window and see away across the hills to Schunemunk Mountain. See, that's the big blue mountain away over there that looks like a dog sleeping. You know, I've never been there. Let's drive over tomorrow and climb it."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Western Hemisphere Now

FOR THE UNITED STATES and the nations of the Western Hemisphere the war has taken an unforeseen and momentous turn for the worse. The unforeseen development is that the Nazis are able to send powerful forces into Africa. They have broken through the British fleet in the Mediterranean, landing armored divisions and the equipment of their air force in Africa, and this break-through is more ominous and will have more far-reaching consequences than their more spectacular successes in the Balkans.

LIPPMANN

For if the Nazis can exploit their new position in Africa, it will not only be Egypt and Suez that are threatened. There will be a much greater threat to the French Empire in West Africa where it fronts the Atlantic Ocean. If the Nazis are able to go to Casablanca and Dakar, the defense of South America will not be, as we have been inclined to regard it, a theoretical problem for the remote future if Hitler should win in Europe: the defense of South America will become an urgent problem of the present phase of this very war. The question of hemisphere defense, it is now certain, is going to be settled not at some conveniently distant time in the future but in the year 1941.

WE MUST FIX our attention on Africa. For what is happening in the Balkans was not unexpected by cool observers: all the alternatives open to the Allies were at least as bad, and perhaps worse, than the situation which they face today. The easy absorption of Yugoslavia would have meant the annihilation of Greece and at the very least the capitulation of Turkey. The disruption of the Balkans and the necessity imposed upon the Nazis of fighting for what they get is a stumbling block in their path; the position everywhere would be worse if they had not been resisted in the Balkans. But the fact that they have also gotten into Africa, if it means that they can now send an expanding army into Africa, is a very serious matter which was not adequately foreseen. For it is evident that if they have a base of operations in Africa, they can go west as well as east. They can move not only against Egypt and Suez but against, or through, the French Empire under Marshal Weygand towards the Atlantic Ocean.

From the French coast of Africa they would be much nearer to Brazil and the Argentine and Uruguay than we are. Nazi submarines, long range bombers, and surface raiders would be in a position to cut the North Atlantic from the South Atlantic: to raid, if not to dominate, the commercial routes from the United States and Britain to South America and South Africa and around the Cape of Good Hope, and also to make it at once an exceedingly difficult naval enterprise for the United States to get to South America to help in defending it against a Quisling revolution or even an invasion. If the Nazis get to the Atlantic coast of Africa, the problem for us will not be whether we can defend the Western Hemisphere but how we shall undertake to recapture the means to defend it. It would be as hard for us to defend Brazil or Uruguay as it is for the British to defend Yugoslavia and Greece. For we also should then be defending a very difficult region at a great distance under extremely uncertain military and political conditions.

WE SHALL NOT be able to defend South America as Colonel Lindbergh has told us it could be defended: by 10,000 modern planes based upon South America. Even if we had the planes, they are not yet an organized air force; even if we had the air force, we do not have a base in South America; even if we had a base in South America, we should have to hold it with troops and maintain it and supply it by ships that would have to run the gantlet of submarines, bombers, and surface raiders in the South Atlantic bottleneck. Only the Navy can defend South America, and the Navy can do it only if with the fleet we have, the Navy does not also have to defend the North Atlantic and the Pacific as well.

Therefore, the support of British sea power in the Atlantic is more than ever an absolute necessity for the defense of the Western Hemisphere. The decision to defend Greenland proves this conclusively. In spite of Colonel Lindbergh's assurances that Greenland is of no military value, the Nazis are operating their blockade right up to the coast of Greenland, and there is unmistakable evidence that they have already tried to establish themselves in Greenland. If they did, they would not only have new operating points for their blockade of Britain, but they could reach way down toward Newfoundland and the northern sea and air ways to Canada.

YET, AND THIS is the crucial point we must bear in mind, the only reason we are now able to undertake the "defense" of Greenland is that the British Isles stand unconquered with their navy between Greenland and Hitler's Europe. Were Britain to fall, Greenland would fall too. For how could we get to Greenland past the Nazi submarines and bombers and air-borne troops operating, not from France or Norway, but from Scotland and Ireland?

As a matter of fact, every base we establish in Greenland, just as every base in the British Isles, just as every base in the French Empire, just as every base we may establish in Brazil or the South Atlantic, will, if Britain and the United States lose command of the Atlantic, be turned aganist us and the whole Western Hemisphere. If we are unable to hold the outposts, of which by all odds the greatest is the British Isles, the positions we have failed to defend will become the bases for the attack.

THIS IS A GRIM prospect, but we shall be derelict in our duty if we allow ourselves the luxury of not facing it squarely. Our hope, and it is a good one, lies in the fact that we are warned while there is still time to take effective measures. Our danger is that we shall hesitate to take effective measures while there is still time to make them effective. The fact, which we have to face, is that the actual defense of the Western Hemisphere is at stake in this immediate phase of the war, and that the question presented to us is not how to defend the hemisphere in the post-war world but how in the next few months to hold on to the means of defending the Western Hemisphere.

J. E. Hoover Refuses to Testify Before House Defense Inquiry

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, yesterday declined to appear before the House Military Affairs committee in its investigation of lags in the defense program.

Committee members had hoped to question the FBI head regarding reported subversive activities in strikes.

Stating that he was acting with the "support" of President Roosevelt and Attorney General Jackson, Hoover made his decision known in the form of a letter to Representative Andrew J. May (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the Military Committee, saying:

"I have received your request that I should appear and testify as to information of the Federal Bureau of Investigation on various matters before your committee.

"As director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation since 1924, I have never appeared before a Congressional committee to discuss the work of the bureau other than the appropriations committee, passing on the bureau's own appropriation. During this entire period it has been the uniform policy that the confidential character of the work of the bureau as an aid to the prosecuting arm of the Government should be protected. The reasons for this have been compelling. A policy of disclosure otherwise than through the processes of the court would, in my opinion, be fatal to the future usefulness of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

"Pursuant to this well-established policy, I must decline to appear as a witness or to disclose the investigations and records of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. I have submitted my views in this matter to the Attorney General, who concurs therein, and who also advises me that this long-standing policy is to be continued at the direction of the President."

At his press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt said it would only muddy the waters to go into the details of his conference Wednesday with Philip Murray, C. I. O. president.

He indicated that the situation was getting along very well, but that the less publicly said about current labor disputes, the better.

None of the various Congressional inquiries into the defense program was in session yesterday; but Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, issued through his office a statement that he had evidence showing the Communist Party would attempt "during the next few days" to bring about "a general strike in the aluminum industry which centers in Cleveland, Ohio."

"Four leading members of the Communist Party in Ohio are engineering these latest efforts of the Communist Party to tie up an industry which is absolutely vital to the national defense program," said the statement of Dies, who is chairman of the House Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities. He is at present in Texas.

The four men, the statement said, are engaged in an effort at sabotage "on behalf of the totalitarian powers."

Investigations into defense problems by the special Truman Committee of the Senate and by the House Naval Affairs Committee are scheduled to begin next week; while hearings on the Ball bill for a compulsory "cooling-off" period will soon begin under direction of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

The Once Over

One-Act Play

SCENE: VALLEY FORGE.

TIME: CROSSING OF THE DELAWARE.

Aide—Well, hardly, General.

George—What's the trouble now? We've got to get across the river.

Aide—We've got to have boats, sir.

George—Of course. I asked for them months ago.

Aide—Well, they haven't arrived.

George—Haven't arrived? They should have been here days ago.

Aide—Yes, sir, but there was that trouble with the boat builders.

George—I thought that had been setled.

Aide—It had been, but there was a walkout in the shipping department. We managed to get that settled, but it seems there was a strike at the receiving end.

George—I must have boats to cross the Delaware. We must get them at once.

Aide—I think maybe we can get them through in a few days, but there's another thing.

George—What now?

Aide—Oar trouble! There are no oars for the boats. Everything's been tied up at the oar plant.

George—We will have to have our men make some oars right here on the ground.

Aide—That could be done, but we have oarlocks for only one side of the boats. The ones for the other side couldn't get through the picket lines.

George—I must find a way out of this. Fetch me my new heavy overcoat. It's getting very cold.

Aide—I forgot to tell you about that.

George—Now don't tell me I'm having trouble getting a heavy overcoat.

Aide—We finally got the coat through . . . practically.

George—What do you mean "practically?"

Aide—Well, one sleeve is missing. There was a serious tie-up in the uniform shop, but we managed to get enough men back to work to finish the coat, all but one sleeve.

George—I suppose I'm lucky at that.

Aide—Have you any safety pins, General?

George—Safety pins!

Aide—Yes. The buttonhole makers were out, too.

George—This is an outrage, but nevertheless we must cross the Delaware. Get busy at once.

(The curtain is lowered to denote the passing of several nights, marked by leisurely activities of mediators and by numerous radio broadcasts urging everybody, especially Washington and his soldiers, to make sacrifices.)

George (preparing to step into a boat for his historic crossing)—Where's my horse? He's got to be taken along.

Aide—There will be a little delay there. The hostlers are framing some demands.

George—Where's the young man who is to stand beside me with the colors?

Aide—He just walked out, sir. Something about seniority rules.

George—Help me shove this boat off! Where are those fellows with the big oars to push the ice-cakes away?

Aide—Sorry, sir, but they've just been beaten up by a delegation from the Ice Shovers Local 182.

(Washington leaps into the river and swims across.)

An encouraging sign of the times is the appearance of small nations that say "No" when invited to behave like rats.

They say that when a New Dealer is instructing his son in the virtues of restraint and poise, he says, "Now remember, always before you fly off the handle, count ten billion."

There will be an Axis conference between Hitler and Mussolini as soon as a soundproof room can be found for it.

It would be a wonderful thing to get up some morning and hear that John L. Lewis had cooperated with somebody in all-out support of the United States.

What a relief it will be to get back to a day when a man can justifiably get depressed over things like four-putt greens, a chair on the wrong side of a pleasure boat, and a delay in a phone call.

Post-War England

By Harold J. Laski

Mr. Churchill And Reconstruction

LONDON.

NO ONE, I think, who has lived here in the grim months since Mr. Churchill became Prime Minister can doubt that he is the greatest war leader Britain has produced since the days of Chatham. It is not merely that he has audacity and courage and energy which border on the fantastic. He has the power to communicate those qualities to the nation he serves. He embodies as few prime ministers ever embodied in war the will of the people for victory. His steadfast refusal to contemplate any result other than complete victory has communicated itself to the mind and heart of every class in the nation.

LASKI

But Mr. Churchill is not only the prime minister; he is also the leader of the Conservative Party. It is no secret that Conservatives were considerably disturbed at the break in routine thought which is characteristic of the whole nation; it is a break which even communicated itself to a part of the Conservatives themselves. New ideas are in the air on all sides: social experiment is spoken of on every hand.

There is the wide realization that whatever the reconstruction means are we cannot go back to the Britain of mass unemployment, the distressed areas, the life of slumdom, the imperfect education system. Wherever privilege stands in the way of such changes it is clear enough that that privilege will be challenged to its foundations. Once victory is won, no Laborite will remain in association with Mr. Churchill for a single week unless he is prepared to tackle these problems forthrightly and at once.

IT IS NOT unnatural that these possibilities alarm the older generations, not the least those who are most influential in the Tory machine. They see the prospect of a "New Deal" in Britain and they are frankly alarmed at its implications. Mr. Churchill, whose mind obviously has been concentrated on the immediate problems of war, set himself out the other day to quiet this alarm.

He explained that he disliked all the talk of a new order. He wanted to preserve the traditional Britain. He hoped for continuance of the present government until at least peace had been made—something like the three-year-period of which the Liberal leader, Sir Archibald Sinclair, has spoken. He favored some "practical measures of reconstruction," but he spoke almost with anger against proponents of a new social order. He remarked that he was glad to think that he and his colleagues in the war cabinet had achieved friendship which transcended something that he called "partisan shibboleths."

Any party leader must be forgiven much when he is seeking to soothe the alarms of faithful followers who see the emergence of a social landscape to which they are wholly unaccustomed; much of the legislation the war has involved in Britain must look to Tory diehards rather like the Wagner Act or the Securities Act appeared to members of the Union League Club. But it is as well to say with emphasis that insofar as the speech was a reflection of Mr. Churchill's inner mind it involves quite certainly the end of the national government immediately the supreme task of victory has been achieved.

For, quite indifferently to the party, no one who has seriously observed the impact of this war on Britain can doubt for a moment that any return to the traditional habits of September 3, 1939, is quite impossible. The needs of the war itself have begun to exert a silent but profound revolution. The effect of the air raids; the gearing of industry to war needs; the consequences of the immense movements of population; the necessity of vital changes in the whole agricultural landscape; the enhanced status of trade unions; the dynamic implied in all these things, to take examples only, meant that a post-war effort to return to "normalcy" would be impossible.

IT IS NOT only that it would arouse furious indignation among the masses. They have accepted with amazing courage and resolution the immense suffering, material and psychological, that the war has inflicted. They will accept in the same temper whatever the future may involve to secure victory. But they have already decisively rejected in their minds any idea that the kind of reconstruction the post-war world must bring can be compared to the "few practical measures" of which Mr. Churchill spoke. That looks far too like the Lloyd George experience after Versailles. It imports the grim memories of hundreds of thousands of soldiers tramping the streets in search of work. It revives memories of those "hard-faced men who look as though they had done very well out of the war," of whom Mr. Keynes (John Maynard Keynes, noted economist) spoke in a phrase that has become historic.

If this speech represented Mr. Churchill's thoughts, it is fit and proper to comment that he will have to think again. For there is no Labor colleague in his government who could dare enclose either Mr. Churchill's premises or his conclusions before a Labor conference and hope to remain leader of the party. There is none who could say that he would be satisfied with a "few practical measures of reconstruction" without being overwhelmed with indignant repudiation. It is not, Mr. Churchill may be assured, a matter of "partisan shibboleths." There is no person whose business it is to think seriously about the lessons of this war who has not realized the folly of rigid dogmatism. What has most profoundly affected the mind of labor is the central, decisive perception that no state in which there is mass unemployment, especially after an experience like war, can hope to remain a democracy.

AND ONCE that postulate is accepted—as even Mr. Churchill himself accepts it—what follows is the inescapable necessity for the state to control, in the name of the whole community, all those vested interests which, so long as their inner principle is a search for profit only, are indifferent either to the fact or the consequences of mass unemployment. Once that postulate is accepted in fact, the "traditional England," in the sense, for example, of the England which Mr. Chamberlain symbolized, has no more prospect of survival than is given our victory in Germany by Hitler or in Italy by Mussolini. Given the postulate, we will make our way to a new Britain as a condition of preserving our democratic way of life.

It may be, of course, that Mr. Churchill meant no more than to emphasize his dislike of those doctrinaires who talk glibly of pulling up the foundations by the roots, that he was warning the country of the need to move forward by the accepted methods of ordered progress through parliamentary government. If he meant only that, for a master of language his speech was the most unfortunate utterance he has made since the war. It certainly aroused widespread suspicion among the Labor Party. It created wonder whether Mr. Churchill's intense preoccupation with problems of military strategy has not blinded him to the magnitude of the long-term issues to which a post-war prime minister will have to set his hand.

I think it likely that a man as imaginative and audacious as Mr. Churchill is likely to have second and better thoughts upon this matter. No prime minister, after victory, is going to remain long in office unless he approaches the peace in the spirit of President Roosevelt's address to Congress last January. He has got to make up his mind that the movement of democratic forces now will not, as in the past, be prepared to halt at the frontiers of economic and social privilege. He has got to be capable of seeing that the survival of democracy depends on the enlargement of democracy.

MR. CHURCHILL'S services to this nation since he became prime minister have, in all that relates to the war, been literally immense. His insight has been profound, his touch remarkably sure and his prestige rightly so great that it would be tragic if it could not be used at least in the first stages of healing and reconstruction. That is a matter that will depend on his capacity to see the issues before us in the new perspective that history has given them. Without that perspective he could not use his prestige creatively. And it is the happiest feature of democratic policy to build on the assumption that no man is indispensable.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

(Following is the first of two articles on the prevalence of colds and "flu" in the Nation.)

Bad Year For Flu

Princeton, N. J., April 11.—The past winter will go down in United States public health records as one of the worst in recent years for "flu" and grippe. In the first ten weeks of 1941 more than half a million cases of the flu—mostly of the "mild" variety—were reported to United States health authorities.

Yet even the records of the United States Public Health Service, headed by capable Surgeon General Thomas Parran, do not begin to indicate how widespread was the sweep of the 1940-41 flu, nor how costly it was in lost working time and reduced physical efficiency for millions of Americans.

For the fact is that millions of Americans had the flu this winter without calling in a doctor, and because of differences in local regulations, many cases of flu in which a doctor was called were never reported to United States health authorities.

The probable dimensions of the last winter's flu epidemic are indicated today for the first time in a survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion. Questions put to a cross-section of several thousand men and women in all parts of the country—the results of which will be of particular interest to the medical profession—point to the following conclusions:

Flu Hit One in Four

1. That fully a fourth of the adult population suffered from flu or grippe during the last winter. When this figure is applied to the total adult population of more than 80 millions, the Institute survey indicates that at least 20 million adult Americans were affected between October and March.

2. Even this number does not include cases among children and others under 21, which would mean an additional 12 or 13 million cases, assuming the same rate of incidence as among older people.

3. While flu and grippe spared no section of the country—and neither the cities nor the farms—it appears that the highest flu rates were in small towns and rural areas, and in the South and West, the latter section being where the 1940-41 epidemic was first observed by medical authorities.

4. Inadequacy of the normal health records on the subject is indicated by the fact that only one person in three who reported having had the flu said he had called a physician. The remainder said they had doctored themselves—either because "it wasn't serious enough to call a doctor," or "because we couldn't afford one."

"Have you had the flu or grippe since October?" the Institute's question asked.

The Nation-wide picture, as gathered by resident interviewers in hundreds of towns, cities and rural areas, is shown in the following figures:

	Pct. of Adults	Estimated No. In Millions
Had Flu or Grippe Since October	25%	20,000,000
Escaped Flu or Grippe	75%	60,000,000

The Institute estimates that nearly 2½ million of the 20 million suffered more than one attack during the six-month period.

Analysis of Survey

The following percentages show the incidence of flu as reported by adults in various sections of the country and various population groups:

	Flu Since October	Escaped Flu
(Adults Only)
Men	24%	76%
Women	27	73
Under $1,000	27%	73%
$1,000 to $2,500	23	77

Inflexible Policy

By Mark Sullivan

Reasons Behind The Greenland Pact

WHAT WE HAVE done about Greenland is a detail of the largest problem we have in the war. Our step about Greenland is one in a process of which the end cannot be foreseen, but is bound to be fateful.

SULLIVAN

To understand the whole problem, and the part Greenland plays in it, start with the one most uncompromising policy we have in the field of foreign relations. It was originally expressed in the Monroe Doctrine, has been repeated in many resolutions of Congress, emphasized in many communications to foreign countries, and in the past at least once upheld by threat on our part to use arms. The doctrine may be expressed thus:

The United States will not assent to the transfer of any territory in the American hemisphere, from one non-American nation to another. (Another part of the doctrine forbids the acquisition of a non-American power of any territory in the American hemisphere, territory now independent; but this part of the doctrine is not here in question.)

WHEN THIS WAR began there were several pieces of territory in the American continent which might become involved, and several which are now actually involved. They were pieces of territory long owned by European nations. To the present and past ownership of them by these European nations we had no objection—the present ownership extended in most cases far back in history, to before the Monroe Doctrine was announced. The list includes:

Islands and one bit of South America owned by Holland.

Islands and some mainland owned by Britain.

To the list, we now add Greenland, owned by Denmark. Formerly Greenland was not thought of as part of the American hemisphere—it was not much thought about at all. We now assert that geographically Greenland is a part of the American hemisphere, and therefore covered by the Monroe Doctrine.

About all these pieces of territory, it was apparent when war began that if Germany conquered any of the nations owning American territories, we would be obliged, under our doctrine, to take notice. Presently, possibility became actuality. Germany conquered France, Holland and Denmark.

BY CONQUEST, Germany got some kind of title to the American territories of those conquered nations. The nature and degree of Germany's present title is a matter of international law. A conqueror's title is as complete as the conqueror chooses to say it is—provided the conqueror is strong enough to make its claim effective.

Germany has title, but does not have possession. The reason she does not have posession is that she cannot come over and take possession—she is prevented by the British navy.

If Germany conquers England, not only would Germany—if she wished to and presumably she would—be free to come over and take possession of these French, Dutch and Italian dependencies. In addition, and most portentously, Germany would, by conquest of Britain, get a conqueror's title to the British dependencies in the American hemisphere.

The problem thus set before America was potentially serious from the day the war began. (And was, incidentally, a sufficient and ironical answer to those extreme isolationists who said the war was no affair of ours, that we should not become involved.) The problem became actual the day Germany entered Denmark, though not many realized it then, for few ever thought about Greenland. But the day Germany conquered Holland, and later France, the problem became actual and imminent.

THE PROBLEM, like most, is one that had best be met before it arises. We could not sit still and wait until Germany, with England conquered, sends cruisers and armed forces to take possession of those conquered dependencies, raises the swastika over them. That we would not allow this is the most settled foreign policy we have.

We had to be prepared to prevent it, or avert it. Much that we have been doing in naval preparedness, including our acquisition of naval bases from Britain, is in preparedness to prevent Germany from taking possession of those dependencies. It is in furtherance of this preparedness that we now set up naval and air bases in Greenland. All is in preparation to resist Germany's taking possession of American dependencies of conquered countries.

In addition, much else that we have been doing is to prevent Germany from ever making the attempt. That is one reason we are helping Britain. For so long as Britain and the British navy survive, Germany cannot even make the attempt. What we would be faced with, if Britain were conquered, is a thing so momentous, so huge and so confused, that few comprehend it.

New Picture at Keith's Is Gaily Human Comedy

Charles Coburn, Appearing in Person Yesterday, And Jean Arthur in Exceptional Film, 'The Devil and Miss Jones;' Varied 'Shorts'

"THE DEVIL AND MISS JONES." RKO-Radio picturization of an original screen play by Norman Krasna, starring Jean Arthur, with Charles Coburn, Robert Cummings, Edmund Gwenn, Spring Byington, S. Z. Sakall, William Demarest, Walter Kingsford, Montagu Love, Richard Carle, Charles Waldron, Edwin Maxwell, Edward McNamara, Robert Emmett Keane, Florence Bates, Mat McHugh and Julie Warren. Directed by Sam Wood. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

AT 12:45 YESTERDAY Charles Coburn, one of the most distinguished figures in the American theater, walked out upon the stage at RKO-Keith's Theater and with characteristic graciousness and warmth revived fragrant memories of his earlier appearances in Washington in what Maurice Chevalier always described as "in the flesh." He recalled that during the Taft Administration the Coburn Players presented the only night performances that ever have been given on the White House grounds. He even confided to his listeners that on that illustrious occasion two New York newspapermen were costumed as "foresters" in the cast, to get the story for the Gotham press, and that numerous Secret Service men also were impressed into service as "supers" for "protective" purposes. There followed many amusing anecdotes of his present tour, that has pretty thoroughly covered the Eastern Seaboard, Hollywood and his monumental experience behind the footlights and before the cameras.

BELL

Mr. Coburn, a gentleman of fine mind and heart, is a fluent and ingratiating speaker. He was immediately en rapport with his audience—which should have been larger than it was at the first performance—and left them with a higher regard than ever for an author-actor-producer-director who has contributed so much to the highest traditions of the playhouse. His one-day visit to Washington will be as memorable to those fortunate enough to have heard him yesterday as it will be to him as a reminder of past triumphs on Washington stages.

Picture Will Impress Him on Memory

The future enthusiasm that the Capital will feel toward Mr. Coburn was further enhanced by his superlative performance in "The Devil and Miss Jones," the current attraction at Keith's. If he is not the star of the picture—and, in the view of this department, he is—he at least deserves to share costellar honors with Jean Arthur, whose name appears topmost in the listings. "The Devil and Miss Jones" is one of those rare comedy-dramas that contrives to achieve its every end of humor, humanness and romantic charm by means that do not violate any of the laws of believability, let alone all of them. It is the story of "the richest man in the world," whose fortune is so great that he even has forgotten that he owns a huge department store "below Thirty-eighth Street." When he is hung in effigy by socially-minded and rebellious employes, he determines to hunt out the culprits and deal with them as they deserve. So he becomes a salesman in the children's shoe department, encounters a series of amazing experiences and winds up as one of the ringleaders in the "union" strike against unfair practices. He even acquires a bride and a host of friends in the process. The picture unfolds an unbroken succession of sequences that are so down-to-earth, so unpretentiously natural and so deeply touched with human kindness as to place it among the better-cut comedy gems of the year.

Well Written, Directed—Better Acted

While "The Devil and Miss Jones"—Mr. Coburn is the "Devil" and Jean Arthur the "Miss Jones"—has been deftly written by Norman Krasna and splendidly directed by Sam Wood, it is to the superior work of the cast that it is chiefly indebted for its emergence as one of the cinema's worthier achievements. Mr. Coburn, as we have intimated, is flawless as the multi-millionaire who learns so much of human values, as a department store underling; on a picnic at Coney Island, where he runs afoul of the law and is rescued by the flaming Americanism of a lad of whom he thinks none too highly; from his restrained contacts with working girls, whom he cannot at first understand, but eventually comes to love, and from an objective view of the petty tyrannies of "executive authority." Jean Arthur, as the principal girl in the case, plays with her accustomed quizzically charming naivete, and Robert Cummings, as the firebrand of the developments, does an altogether commendable job. Spring Byington, S. Z. Sakall, Walter Kingsford, Montagu Love, Richard Carle, Edwin Maxwell, Charles Waldron, Edward McNamara—once again in policeman's uniform—and Regis Toomey are among the many others who aid in elevating "The Devil and Miss Jones" to a top perch.

Mr. Coburn has not as yet seen the picture. I suggest that he do so at the earliest opportunity, just to discover how good he is, if for no other reason.

Sandwiched between Mr. Coburn's personal appearances and the screenings of the film yesterday, were a considerable list of better-than-usual supplementary screen attractions. Foremost among these was the issue of "The March of Time," devoted to "Australia at War," which deals not only with the Crown Colony's contribution to the European conflict, but also flashes danger signals in the Far East. "Pluto's Playmate" is one of Walt Disney's happiest creations in Technicolor. The little guy of the title is a diminutive seal that rescues Pluto from the sorry ministrations of a devilish little octopus. Very funny. The Pathe News completes an entertainment of the first water that it would be a shame to miss.

By Richard L. Coe

"THE GREAT LIE." Warner Brothers picturization of a novel by Polan Banks, adapted to the screen by Lenore Coffee, costarring Bette Davis and George Brent, with Mary Astor, Lucile Watson, Hattie McDaniel, Grant Mitchell, Jerome Cowan, Charles Trowbridge, Thurston Hall, Russell Hicks, Virginia Brissac, Olin Howland, J. Farrell MacDonald, Addison Richard and Sam McDaniel. Music by Max Steiner. Directed by Edmund Goulding. Previewed Wednesday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Miss Bette Davis, the First Lady of the Warner Studios, is revealed as a generous though somewhat betrayed actress in her new film, "The Great Lie," now on the Earle screen.

For that frequently effective emotional star, with the liberality of a sound trouper, not only permits a lesser player, Mary Astor, a role more vividly endowed than her own, but, moreover, is forced to struggle with a series of emotional complexities that are rarely convincing.

More sinned against than sinning is the Maryland miss the actress is called upon to play. She's long loved a jaunty, brave fellow (played by George Brent) who gets tight one night and marries a world-famous pianist only to discover that that modish figure had gotten her dates mixed and technically wasn't free to marry him 'til next Tuesday. With which he sets down his plane in the Maryland countryside and marries the unsophisticated minx. After that Script-Writer Lenore Coffee lures him to South America for national defense and he's given up for lost.

Miss Astor's Role Striking

What has Miss Davis to live for? Well, the worldly pianist reveals she may become the mother of the lost airman's unborn child. The bereft wife sees an opportunity to perpetuate her husband's name, promises the extravagent pianist an income for life if she'll have the child and give him to her to raise. The bargain's sealed, the baby arrives in far-off Arizona, the pianist returns to her keyboard and the widow to her Maryland manse, a proud mother.

So when Brent returns from the Amazon, his ecstatic wife is too happy to reveal the terrible truth. Her falsehood is unspoken. It is, in fact, "The Great Lie," but the peripatetic pianist finally forces the distraught wife to tell all.

Even this bald recitation of harrowing events must give some inkling of the varied troubles that beset a simple country girl. With her admirable role in "The Letter" still fresh in mind, it's therefore something of a disappointment to find so loose a tale successor to that taut melodrama. It's hardly a rewarding assignment, but Miss Davis struggles and on occasion makes it live.

Miss Astor is striking as the full-blooded pianist, making the most of her rich role with telling restraint. This unique player, who never seems to age, has never looked more distinctive and her performance doubtless will bring fresh zest to a long career. Still, one can't help wondering how Miss Davis would have been in the same part.

Tasteful Stage Revue

George Brent has very little demands on his talents as the disputed man and the veteran Lucile Watson acts for the cameras the role of a Washington hostess which is bringing her such cheers in the play "Watch on the Rhine." Hattie McDaniel is the faithful Negro mammy, a tradition that seems to have been getting a trifle out of hand lately.

For the Earle stage, Harry Anger has produced one of those tasteful, unpretentiousness revues that have become a Thirteenth Street tradition. There are no outstanding stars, but all the performers are amiable, able and astute. Jo Lombardi's orchestra opens the brief variety bill with a touch of "Faust" that soon becomes Irving Berlin's "Easter Parade," with those nice Roxyettes doing pretty things.

Lorraine and Rognan, a boy-girl team, dance, sputter comically and adapt some of the style of Rose King without her rare facility. A group of Ben Yost male singers, these called "The Continentals," sing a selection from "The Student Prince" loudly if not well. The piano-minded Hellmans offer the bill's most unique act at their two keyboards and the Roxyettes join the performers in a happy, spring-like finale.

Farewell to Lent

Lent will be ushered out this year with a gala midnight show tonight at Loew's Capitol Theater. Starting at 11:30 there will be a complete stage and screen show for those persons who "gave up" playgoing for Lent.

On the stage this week, the Capitol is presenting Horace Heidt, and his Pot o' Gold Stars, the Musical Knights. On the screen "The Trial of Mary Dugan," with Laraine Day and Robert Young starring.

There will be no advance in prices and no reserved seats for the midnight show.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, April 11.

AT THE OVERSEAS PRESS CLUB Thursday, some of the correspondents told of the censorship difficulties of the last war. Tom Johnson revealed this story of '18—of the time when the war correspondents, who were sending their expense slips to their home offices, had to submit those slips to the censor. And once, even an expenses lip was censored . . . A reporter named Dillon had submitted an expense item of $250 "for entertaining Gen. Pershing." The censors refused to send this to Dillon's editor, and questioned Dillon about it. The correspondent admitted that it wasn't true. "I couldn't account for $250," he explained, "and for such a large item, 'entertaining Gen. Pershing' was the only thing I could think of."

GEORGE JESSEL'S father-in-law has been drafted for Army service! His name is George Gourley, and he's stationed now at San Luis Obispo. He's 36 years old; and in the fall, when his daughter, the 17-year-old Lois Andrews, expects her baby, Gourley will become a soldier grandfather . . . Tommy Manville, who was 47 years old last night, decided it's time to become serious, and now is seeking a way of entering the combat service. Tommy served in the Navy in 1917 . . . Eugene Lyons, editor of the American Mercury, is "helping" Patrick Hitler write the story of Uncle Adolf . . . 35 Notre Dame students plan to enlist in the Naval Air Corps in June, and form a Fighting Irish Squadron.

AT FEFE'S MONTE CARLO last night, Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures, saw Jim Farley dancing with a beautiful lady. He sent Farley a note: "I'll sign her without a screentest." Farley replied: "She already has a fine job. She's the wife of the Brazilian Ambassador" . . . Success-story-of-the-week: Ruth Hommond, hat-check girl at Fefe's. Tomorrow she becomes a showgirl there. This month Twentieth Century-Fox will give her a screen-test.

JOHN FANTE, the young novelist who wrote "Dago Red" and "Wait Until Spring, Bandini," is of the tough, realist school of writers, whose cum laude alumni includes Jim Tully, the former hobo . . . Fante met Tully in California, and the veteran started to advise the youngster about the writing profession. "Save up your pennies," said Tully, "and then go and get yourself a copy of this book." He showed Fante a copy of the "Oxford Book of Verse" . . . "First earn enough to buy this book, keep it and read it. There's writing in that," said Jim Tully . . . Fante took the book, and opened the first page. It bore the marks of an old faded rupper stamp, "Public Library."

RAY MILLAND, who participates in a mock bombing-attack on Los Angeles, in the movie "I Wanted Wings," made that scene a few minutes before he received a cable informing that his own home, in Sussex, had been bombed and destroyed . . . Eleanor Roosevelt wrote an essay on "The Moral Basis of Democracy," to be read at the National Sharecroppers Week Celebration at the Roosevelt. Mrs. Roosevelt was unable to attend, and so Hazel Scott, of Cafe Society Uptown, was invited to read Mrs. Roosevelt's essay to the audience.

VICTOR MATURE, whose appendix was removed received a phone call from a friend, before he was removed to the hospital. "I don't feel well," Mature confessed. "But you know me—Mature, from '1,000,000 B. C.' The good old jungle-stuff will cure me—the good old gallons of hot water." He tried this ancient remedy, collapsed, and was rushed to the hospital.

Chills-and-Fever Orgy Packs Metropolitan for 'Shock Bill'

Cheers for man-killing Gargantua rent the air as the monster shambles forward to crush another victim. People snicker when Basil Rathbone says "So glad to see you" to the dear old gentleman and blandly trips him under a subway express. There are howls of laughter when the fussy little coroner announces again and again "He's dead."

Yes, people are having a wonderful time at Metropolitan's "Shock Week." They crowded the theater for the very first show yesterday. Everybody was in a comedy mood, all set for an orgy of killer-dillers. Not one soul could have been disappointed. We lost count of the homicides, but we remember one grave-robbing, one graceful swandive off a skyscraper, a fake marriage, a smidgeon of white slavery and a corpuscle-curdling brain operation. Our companion at the show said, "Thanks for a gruesome afternoon. It couldn't have been more repulsively delightful."

Two Shockers on Bill

"The Mad Doctor" and "The Monster and the Lady" are the two shockers generously provided by the Metropolitan for its festival of chills and shivers. Between them you'll see the choicest assortment of moral lepers,, gangsters and criminal maniacs ever brought to the screen. Also some extremely elegant acting. For the casts include some of the best names in cinemaland. Basil Rathbone plays the title role of "The Mad Doctor" and is assisted greatly by a sinister and ghoulish young fellow named Martin Kasleck. You'll love the way Martin swishes himself with perfume after killing a night watchman.

Big names teem in the cast of "The Monster and the Lady." Among them are Paul Lukas, Joseph Calleia, Cliff Edwards. But the dominant figure is naturally, the monstrous gorilla avenger of wrongs. The gorilla is no meanie, though his looks are nightmarish. He's a beast with a human soul whose idea of a good deed a day is to exterminate a lowlife. Sometimes he overdoes it.

Beautiful Ellen Drew plays the leading femme roles in both plays with such prettiness and finesse that she seems like Snow White wandering into Bluebeard's closet.

There's nothing really virulent about either of these avowed "shockers." They're just a field day for thrills and shivers. And the public is in the mood for escapist adventure.

P. S.: We loved the lady who squealed "Goodness, is that his brain throbbing!" when the doctors wheeled in a recumbent form with a huge balloonlike pulsation in the stomach region!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 11.

The family skeleton often is covered up successfully, but not the artistic skeleton in the actor's cupboard. Some fond fan is forever hauling the old bag of bones out for inspection, with the best intentions in the world. Bob Taylor is still getting programs of the play "Alias the Kid," in which he appeared (and was terrible) at Duane College, Nebr.

HOPPER

Wally Beery has stopped counting the clippings which show him as a Swedish servant girl. Jimmy Cagney is constantly being hailed by fans who remember his female impersonations, and Bing Crosby has a trunk full of reviews of the Paul Whiteman Band, which read, "Mr. Crosby also sang." And how many of you know Humphrey Bogart was a white-flanneled, pink-cheeked collegiate juvenile in the stage play, "Cradle Snatcher"—snatching Mary Boland?

Attention, Hedy Lamarr: I don't know what you did in Germany, but here we can't use a baby scale a year, return it, and get credit for it. So why all the fuss and fury just because the baby's outgrown it? Or shouldn't I ask?

When Mitch Leisen yelled "Cut" the other day on a brawl sequence in "Hold Back the Dawn," two extras who looked like former pugs kept on punching. "What's the idea?" asked Mitch. "Sorry, sir," replied one. "The big bum said this here job was a sinecure, so I says, 'Oh, yeah? If you think it's so tough, why did you quit the ring?'"

Victorville stages its annual rodeo April 13. If it's anything like as grand a whoop-te-do as last year, I'd advise you to grab your 10-gallon hat and make tracks. Me, I'm already booked for Yucca Loma.

A talkative barber is supposed to be poison, but Producer Paul Jones patronizes one who never lets up. He's a dyed-in-the-wool preview fanatic. Paul claims he's the soundest critic he's found yet. Wonder why he hasn't signed him on for a "cutter"—ouch!

Mary Pickford and Mrs. Pat O'Brien have been appointed joint chairmen, or do you say chairladies?) for the "Red-White-and-Blue" party at the Ambassador Hotel May 3, sponsored by the Hollywood Guild for our own needy. List of patrons shows that despite our many war benefits the local big-wigs still do front-and-center for our own.

Buddy Ebsen phoned in a swell suggestion. Seems we have a Messerschmitt at the Vultee plant here. When the Army and Navy get through with it, why not hire a vacant lot, fence it, charge 50 cents a head, and use that money for our crippled children? I'd like to see it, wouldn't you?

They may rename Merle Oberon's next "Four Jacks to the Queen," because she wangled (no, I didn't say mangled) four leading men for it. Joe Cotton, who's so good in "Citizen Kane," heads the list.

When Father Flanagan, of Boys Town, was scheduled to speak in Schenectady, N. Y., recently, the only auditorium they could find was a motion picture theater where a Clark Gable picture was showing. So they took Clark out of the marquee and put in Father Flanagan, who drew standing room only.

There's no keeping up with the Joneses these days. We just manage to master gin-rummy, and along comes Una Merkel and introduces Liverpool-rummy, which she learned from a couple of Royal Air Force pilots. Una says it's something like gin-rummy only more exciting. They can have it—I'm going back to Adrian's and my old favorite, hearts.

Underwood & Underwood

Wives of members of the Traffic Club have formed a club of their own—and it is not an auxiliary to the men's organization, they say. The name, Di-Ma-Va, signifies that the membership is comprised of women from the District, Maryland and Virginia. They meet monthly for luncheon and bridge at the Ambassador Hotel. In the picture (left to right) are Mrs. James R. Griffin, wife of the general agent of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad; Mrs. C. A. D. A. R. Girl 'Pilgrims' Here for 4-Day Visit

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The 48 States and the District of Columbia are represented by curls, pretty faces, blue eyes and brown, and as many variations in speech as are to be found in the Union, with the arrival of the D. A. R. Good Citizenship Pilgrims for a four-day stay in the Capital.

These girls, chosen from among high school seniors in each State on the basis of dependability, service, leadership and patriotism, are here as guests of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution. They are staying at the Washington Hotel, with Mrs. Roscoe O'Byrne, of Brookville, Ind., national chairman of the pilgrimage committee, acting as official "mother."

"Gee, all this is wonderful!" said Edna Billups, fair-haired Pilgrim from Stickney, S. Dak., Edna arrived yesterday morning with the other girls from the Western States, all of whom had become good friends on the trip East. "We had a grand time in Chicago," she said. "We went on a conducted tour of Marshall Field's while we stopped over between trains, and we loved riding up and down on the escalators."

Edna rode the elevators at the hotel with evident enjoyment, too, for her home town has only 300 inhabitants. She is the youngest of three daughters, all of whom are in the printing industry and, although she is only 17 years old, she already does part-time work as a linotype operator in the local newspaper office, which does a large printing business. No sooner had she registered yesterday than she took a printer's holiday and came around the block to visit the composing room of The Post. Edna also sings in the school glee club and plays the flute in the orchestra.

An interesting fact revealed by the list of 48 girls is that as many come from little towns as from large cities. They are an unusually attractive group this year. They show an intelligent interest in their Nation's Capital, their appreciation of the opportunity to make the trip and their eagerness to tell about each other's accomplishments, rather than their own—the qualities of good citizenship which won them the award.

There was a small piano in the suite where Mrs. O'Byrne welcomed the girls, where they received their badges and were registered—and there were plenty of girls to gather around and sing. Among them were Bobbie June Brendle, of Stigler, Okla., who has been a member of the school quartet for three years and is now in the sextet; Phyllis Ingraham, of Point Pleasant, W. Va., who is studying voice; Anne Wendling, of Portland, Oreg., who is a member of the A Capella Choir, won the music cup of her school and is making a special study of both piano and voice. Dorothy Alice Naugle, of Devils Lake, N. Dak., was called on to do the accompanying.

The girls were arriving all day. Those that had come in the morning had lunch together in the Washington Coffee Shop and then rested or went on a tour of the stores in the afternoon, while others were still coming in. They were all accounted for by 5 o'clock, including Louise G. Winfield, 4809 Fifth Street, the District pilgrim, who joined the girls from the States and will stay with them at the hotel during their visit.

Last night, they went to Memorial Continental Hall and were taken on a tour of the building, viewing the interesting rooms furnished by the D. A. R. societies of various States. Miss Helen Johnson, secretary of the museum, showed them relics of special interest there and gave a short talk.

At 9:30 o'clock they were received by Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the National Society, D. A. R., in the president general's room of Constitution Hall. She welcomed them in the name of the society, congratulating them on the qualities of character and achievement that had won them the award and emphasizing the value of such qualities of good citizenship in a time like the present.

Later they rehearsed for their presentation to the congress Monday night.

The girls and their States are: Camille Wright, Alabama; Anna Wallace, Arizona; Ethel Jo Dyer, Arkansas; Marilea Hanson, California; Lucy Lair Harlshorn, Colorado; Pearl Braun, Connecticut; Elizabeth Roselle, Delaware; Louise Winfield, District of Columbia; Barbara Moffat, Florida; Margene Benfield, Georgia; Mildred Swanson, Idaho; Ruth Maloney, Illinois; Maxine McColgin, Indiana; Helen McElroy, Iowa; Frances Hawkinson, Kansas; Betsey Ewing, Kentucky; Margie Wagley, Louisiana; Beverley Spaulding, Maine; Mary Webb, Maryland; Sophie Starzyk, Massachusetts; Loucile Barnes, Michigan; Betty Lilligren, Minnesota; Gloria Sisk, Mississippi; Dorothy Pines, Missouri; Harriet Sather, Montana.

Dolores Bellamy, Nebraska; Bonnie Scott, Nevada; Priscilla Gilchrist, New Hampshire; Marian Powelson, New Jersey; Jessie Williams, New Mexico; Jane Balden, New York; Martha Nicholson, North Carolina; Dorothy Naugle, North Dakota; Mary Selby, Ohio; Bobbie Brendle, Oklahoma; Anne Wendling, Oregon; Mary Dickerson, Pensylvania; Shirley Holley, Rhode Island; Anne Pinckney, South Carolina; Edna Billups, South Dakota; Sara Spann, Tennessee; Merle Brooks, Texas; Barbara Coburn, Utah; Ruth Jordan, Vermont; Katherine Byrne, Virginia; Dorothy Drew, Washington; Phyllis Ingraham, West Virginia; Jenell Carter, Wisconsin, and Joyce Reeve, Wyoming.

B. S. headquarters. Mrs. Albert H. Ely, already familiar to many on the air and with her husband known for many philanthropic activities, will present a brief narrative sketch on which Miss Gillis will comment.

Warren, of the U. S. D. A.-4-H Department; Dr. Paul T. David, of the American Youth Commission, and others.

The alliance has its national headquarters in Richmond, and is currently using the Martinique Hotel as Washington headquarters.

Mrs. Dunbar's Speaking Tour Will End Today

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, returns to federation headquarters, 1734 N street, today after a month's trp through the West, addressing State and district club meetings.

She left here the middle of March, going directly to her home in Portland, Oreg., where she spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. William D. Winter, and addressed the Portland Woman's Club.

From Portland, Mrs. Dunbar wer' to Reno, Nev., and there was guest of honor of the Twentieth Century Club and other women's organizations in the vicinity. She attended a district club meeting the following day in Las Vegas, Nev., and from there went to Los Angeles, Calif., where she spent a day with Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, former president of the General Federation. Dr. Clara D. Burdette, honorary vice president, and Mrs. Elbert W. Shirk, former chairman of the department of junior club women.

Her next stop was in Carlsbad, N. Mex., where she attended the convention of the State Federation of Women's Club. She went on to Chickasha, Okla., for the Oklahoma Convention and Salina, Kans., for the Kansas Convention; then to Abilene, Kans., to confer with Mrs. John Edward Johntz, credentials chairman for the general federation.

April 7, she attended the Institute for Consumer Education at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., and on April 10, the annual meeting of the County Tuberculosis Association at South Bend, Ind.

Mrs. Dunbar has only three more speaking engagements on her calendar before the Triennial Convention of the General Federation in Atlantic City next month, which will mark the close of her administration. On April 29, she goes to Indianapolis for the Indiana convention. May 6, she will address the Virginia State Convention, which will be held at the Wardman Park Hotel here and the following day will be guest speaker at the West Virginia State Convention in Morgantown.

Price Agency to Avoid Wide Freezing

their actual use in all but a few cases. Members of Henderson's staff also pointed out that past moves to set ceilings on runaway prices had come at the request of industrial leaders themselves, and that the same technique of business cooperation was being relied on as a pattern for future price control activity.

The measure of success of the OPACS, they said, will be the degree to which it can stop price spirals without a general price freezing order and with the minimum dislocation of industry. This will be attempted, it was indicated, by enlisting industrial cooperation to report threatening situations, by the conferences, hearings and investigations authorized by the executive order, and by public promulgation of price ceilings where necessary.

"If we have the same cooperation from industry as we have had in the past," one official said, "there will be need for very few price orders. Industry can obviously police itself better than any Government agency or law. It is only common sense for industry to keep prices in line."

To Protect Consumers

Chief function of the OPACS, the President indicated, will be to emphasize consumer protection and to provide a program for use of residual supply of materials among competing civilian demands after military needs for those commodities have been taken care of.

Most significant portion of the order was a paragraph which officials said gave the new agency price fixing duties "across the board," applicable to everything from airplanes to household pots and pans. It gave Henderson authority to:

"Determine and publish, after proper investigation, such maximum prices, commissions, margins, fees, charges or other elements of cost or price of materials or commodities, as the administrator may from time to time deem fair and reasonable; and to take all lawful and appropriate steps to facilitate their observance."

Other major duties to the end of preventing "price spiraling, rising costs of living, profiteering and inflation" and "speculative accumulation, withholding and hoarding" were outlined as:

Making studies of civilian requirements, supply of goods and services status and trend of prices and the impact of the defense program on civilian living standards.

Advising and recommending to other Government agencies on purchase of materials and commodities.

Informing the OPM of civilian needs and consulting with it on "procurement, production planning, priority and other actions" affecting the supply of materials.

Stimulating use of substitute materials.

Stimulating provision of necessary civilian supplies; and Stabilizing rents.

National Ministry

The order also authorized the creation of an advisory Price Administration Committee consisting of Henderson as chairman, and the Secretaries of Treasury and Agriculture, the Federal Loan Administrator, chairmen of the Tariff and Federal Trade Commissions, and the two co-chiefs of the OPM.

In the light of the broad authority in the order over military and defense purchases and policy, and the mandate for economic investigations, it was believed that the Price Administration Committee would function as a sort of national ministry of economics and could broaden its activities to long-range economic planning.

A typical illustration of the pattern the new agency will follow in stopping runaway prices was seen in an announcement of Henderson within a few hours after the signing of the executive order. Pointing to "extortionate prices" for cadmium, "for which the supply and demand picture contains no justification," Henderson warned that unless reasonable levels were restored quickly, "drastic action" would be taken.

Such action, it was assumed, would be in the form of public exposure of those who have "profiteered ruthlessly," and the setting of ceiling prices, similar to those which Henderson has already proclaimed for various secondary and scrap metals.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 11 (INS).—There is nobody like Judy Canova on the screen today. She is a great comic and she never sacrifices a part just to look pretty. Moreover she has a certain wistfulness that comes through probably because she is sincere and real. Judy, who with Gene Autry, is Republic's biggest star, is getting ready for her next picture, "Puddin' Head," in which Francis Lederer plays the male lead.

PARSONS

Francis, who was expected here for a Constance Bennett Columbia picture, checks in instead at Republic April 21, to be co-starred with Judy. 'Tis a mighty good role for Francis, too, since he plays a count, which will fit his accent perfectly.

I was glad to talk to Harry D' Arrast, who has come back from France to be with his wife, the former Eleanor Boardman. He arrived on a Spanish ship and Eleanor met him in Havana and you can imagine what a happy reunion they had after having been parted all those dreadful months. Harry has had any number of offers to direct a picture and he certainly could do one on conditions abroad if he were so inclined. Paramount is interested in a remake of his own picture, "Laughter." He says that in his opinion 99 per cent of the French colonies will rally to the cause of England at their first opportunity.

The riot squad might as well hold itself in readiness. George Montgomery, who is a combination of Clark Gable and Cary Grant (and not a bad combination for any movie hero) is going to kill the femmes. What's even more important to the Montgomery career is this: Ray McCary, who directed him and Cobina Wright, jr., in "The Cowboy and the Blonde" showed the picture to his brother, 'Leo, who is one of the best directors in the business. Leo was so impressed with the good-looking former Montana-cowboy that he wants to borrow him from Twentieth Century-Fox for a lead in one of his forthcoming Howard Hughes pictures. And that, my friends, is not bad news for any movie hero—even one much better established than George.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Elaine Barrie has enrolled in a short story writing class at U. C. L. A., under an assumed name; Laird Cregar, 35 pounds lighter, was on the "Blood and Sand" set today. Measles did it, in case you want to know; Katherine Stevens, Sam Wood's talented and pretty daughter, and Van Heflin have been keeping the telephone busy; Binnie Barnes played a scene in "Angels With Broken Wings" too realistically and she has a broken rib. She was supposed to come between Eddie Norris and Gilbert Roland, who were having a movie fight.

Rosemary Lane and Buddy Westmore will spend Easter Sunday at Victorville and I reckon so will Priscilla, for that's where her boy friend, John Barry, lives; Bill Orr will give his famous impersonation of President in a fireside chat scene in "Navy Blues." All I can say is that when he did it on the stage the Democrats asked us to wait until after election and the Republicans said it gave the Democrats too much publicity. That's how good he is; Count Oleg Cassini and Sylvia Fairbanks at Ciro's one night and Sylvia with Huntington Hartford 3d at the Mocambo the next night.

George Burns gave a blood transfusion to the 3-weeks-old daughter of his brother, who was very ill.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Eleanor Roosevelt's Wedding Gifts Include White House Offerings

By Hope Ridings Miller

A SILVER TEA TRAY, sent by President and Mrs. Roosevelt, has a prominent place among the wedding gifts of Miss Eleanor Roosevelt and Edward Proctor Elliott, who will be married this afternoon in Dedham, Mass. Also in the array of presents are a handsome water kettle and a vegetable dish, both silver, and both from the White House. All the wedding gifts are now on display in the home of the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. John Cutter.

Mrs. Roosevelt will step off the train in Boston this morning to see her niece and namesake married in St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The bride-elect, whose father is Hall Roosevelt, brother of the First Lady, was especially eager that her distinguished aunt attend the ceremony, which is set for 4:30 p. m.

The final party in a round of prenuptial fetes for Miss Roosevelt and Mr. Elliott will take place in Brookline, Mass., today when Dr. and Mrs. Howard B. Sprague entertain at a bridal luncheon. Their daughter, Miss Helen Sprague, is in the wedding party.

Last night Mrs. Cutter was hostess at a buffet supper at her home in Dedham. Guests included John Roosevelt, the President's son, who will be best man, and the bride's brother, Henry Roosevelt, who will give her in marriage. Another member of the Roosevelt clan, Miss Amy Roosevelt, of Detroit, half-sister of the bride and chosen as maid of honor, was also among those present.

Still others there were the Misses Helen Sprague, Natalie Coolidge, Beatrice Talbot and Jessica Stevens, all of Boston; Suzanne Chapman of Rahway, N. J., and Nancy Wilcox of Detroit. Young men in the company, all of whom will be in the wedding, were Eliot Richardson of Brookline, Mass., cousin of the bride; Eero Saarinen, of Cranbrook, Mich.; Arthur Townsend Lougee, of Cambridge; James Simpson of Newborn, N. C.; Vito Girone of Orange, N. J., and Theodore Luderwoski, of New York.

Mrs. Jones Believes In Shopping Early

Mrs. Jesse Jones is one woman you won't find bustling about on any last-minute Easter shopping expedition. Her wardrobe for this season, and for the summer as well, was chosen many months ago.

She said so yesterday when somebody complimented her on the pretty blue and white striped suit she was wearing . . . and presently asked where she got it.

"At home—Houston," she said. "I did all my summer shopping there last December." Everybody present eyed the handsome outfit and agreed she did a mighty good job—if all her outfits are as pretty as that one.

This came out as a bit of table talk yesterday at the Sulgrave Club, where several luncheon parties accented the social calendar. Mrs. Jones was a guest at the largest one, which included a company of 14. The long table, at which guests were seated, was decorated with a center bouquet of yellow jonquils, iris and white stock, all of which blended with the new Easter bonnets adorning the heads of several guests.

In the same party was Mrs. George Mesta, whose wide-brimmed black hat was trimmed with a cluster of yellow blossoms on the front, matching the gold bracelet and necklace that set off her trim black frock.

Plan Brief Trip To New York and Boston

Mrs. Mesta, who has been staying at the Sulgrave Club since she returned from the West Coast several days ago, will be off tomorrow for New York and Boston for a brief stay.

Accompanying her will be attractive Mrs. Jeanne Turner Smythe, of Oklahoma City, who arrived in Washington several days ago and has been staying at the Mayflower. Mrs. Smythe, who was among guests at the Sulgrave Club yesterday, was smartly turned out in a cocoa brown jersey frock, worn with a handsome string of amber beads and a small mustard colored pancake hat.

Mrs. Mercant Mahoney, wife of the Canadian Commercial Counselor, was in the luncheon party, as were Mrs. Bernard B. Jones, Miss Mary Randolph, Mrs. Ollie James and her sister-in-law, Mrs. James Gordon, of Madisonville, Ky.; Mrs. George B. Parker, Mrs. Bernard B. Jones and Mrs. Sydney Cloman, who was asking friends in for tea on Monday afternoon.

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty was hostess at another small luncheon at the Sulgrave, having among her guests Mrs. C. R. Dana, of Norwalk, Conn.; Miss Mary Howry, Mrs. Edgar Orme, and one or two others. In still another group was Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, who was lunching with five friends.

LISTENING POST: Attractive Natalie Keeney Phillips will be Reno bound in June. She and Clifton Phillips decided some time ago to call it a day, and for the past few months she and her small daughter have been living here with her great-aunt, Mrs. Sidney Cloman. Meanwhile, Mrs. Phillips recently took a job selling hats at a local department store.

Ruth Brown And Grid Star Wed Today

Tom Harmon, all-America halfback, will be best man at the wedding today of Miss Ruth M. Brown, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Prentiss M. Brown, of Michigan, to Forest Evashevski, star quarterback and captain of the University of Michigan's football team.

The university's varsity colors, yellow and blue, will predominate in the wedding decorations. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock in the Methodist Church of St. Ignace, Mich., the Rev. W. Leslie Williams officiating. Many prominent personalities in politics and sports of Michigan will attend.

Bride to Have Five Attendants

The bride will wear a gown of ivory satin made on Colonial lines, with a closely fitted basque and high queenly collar of Irish lace. The long, tight sleeves are pointed at the wrists, and the skirt falls in rich folds forming a long, fan-shaped train. Her cap of Irish lace will hold in place a long veil of bridal illusion and she will carry an old fashioned nosegay of white orchid roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Elinor Toms, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Robert M. Toms, of Detroit, will be maid of honor, and Mrs. Hugh Randolph, a sister of the bride, will act as matron of honor. The bridesmaids include two other sisters of the bride, the Misses Patricia and Barbara Brown and Miss Genevra Walker. They will wear frocks of light blue taffeta with matching lace mitts and their hats of yellow daffodills will match their bouquets.

Buffet Supper After Ceremony

A reception and buffet supper at the Brown home will follow the ceremony. Among the guests will be Gov. and Mrs. Murray D. Van Wagoner of Michigan, Lieut. Gov. and Mrs. Frank Murphy and Treasurer Theodore I. Fry and Mrs. Fry.

The bride attended Albion College and, for a semester, the University of Michigan, of which her husband is a graduate. The couple will make their home in Clinton, N. Y., where the bridegroom will coach football at Hamilton College.

Capital Bonnets for Easter

Smart Washingtonians take a tip from spring and prepare to sally forth to the Easter parade in costumes as bright and colorful as the birds and flowers. Above—Mrs. Robert E. Moran, wife of Dr. Moran, takes the flowers for her inspiration, and wears a cluster of them on her bonnet

Capital Whirl

WITH MRS. ARTHUR WOODS, beauty and brains are combined with that all-important grace, imagination. Not only is she working very hard on the practical details of the Virginia Garden Tour, which will take place from April 28 to May 2, for the benefit of Bundles for Britain, but she is preparing to advertise the tour in a most original way. Next week Mrs. Woods will go on the air on Boris Karloff's "Arsenic and Old Lace" hour to tell ghost stories and eerie traditions of the famous old Virginia houses which will be visited on the tour. When I asked Mrs. Woods if she wouldn't have stage fright at broadcasting, she replied: "Not at all. On the contrary, it is my listeners who will, I hope, be frightened into a fit—a very small one."

There being no music festival at Williamsburg this spring, Mrs. Woods is working up one to take place at Charlottesville during the Virginia Garden tour. It will be given in a hall of the University of Virginia and the central figure will be Ralph Kirkpatrick, the harpsichord genius about whom the Williamsburg music festival also centered.

In the midst of all these plans Mrs. Woods found time to ask friends in the other night for dinner to meet her cousin by marriage, Mrs. Junius Morgan, of New York. Mrs. Morgan is a charming and energetic lady who is turning her executive ability to use by helping organize entertainment programs for the army camps. On her trip to Washington she brought along two young English schoolgirls so that they might become acquainted with the capital of their country of refuge.

BEING WELCOMED back that night, after a vacation in Florida, was Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, who was stunning in a fitted dinner gown of scarlet, with touches of black. Also back from Florida was Mrs. Mondell Gregg, who said that she has recovered from the knee injury which kept her limping most of the winter. The popular "Dotty" wore a spring print in a delicate blue and green pattern while our hostess had chosen a gay print in bright tulip shades. The guest of honor contented herself with a simple black taffeta frock but her long, fitted evening wrap was of brilliant lipstick red.

Other guests of Mrs. Woods that night were Justice Frank Murphy, Walter Prendergast, Randall Creel, Walter Chrysler and Frank Vanderlip.

LATEST STATE DEPARTMENT bachelor to be ordered to London, and very pleased at the prospect, is Robert Coe, who will finish his tour of duty in Washington and leave for England toward the end of the summer. Mr. Coe will be very much missed in Washington for, while his work always comes first, his friends are a close second and his hospitality leaves many pleasant memories.

When Mrs. Robert Pell arrives in Washington next week from Bermuda she will find the Pell country place in Virginia rented to Mr. and Mrs. Ross Worthington. Mr. Worthington is adviser to the War Department on radio matters and he and his bride of six months are sure to like Washington as seen from the vantage point of the Pells' lovely "Cornwall."

ON BEHALF OF Queen Elizabeth, Viscountess Halifax has presented a handsome crocodile billfold, bound in gold, to be auctioned at Anderson House on the evening of April 16, when the choice objects d'art selected from the Picadilly Arcade will go on sale. Her Majesty gave the billfold to Lady Halifax with her best wishes, for just such an occasion, and it is a souvenir which will later be of historic interest. Another historic souvenir to be auctioned is the antique cup which was made to commemorate the Peace of Europe treaty, which was signed at Paris on May 30, 1814.

Jelsmas Now In Philadelphia

Lieut. and Mrs. Edward Richard Jelsma are stationed in Philadelphia, where Lieut. Jelsma is on active duty with the United States Navy. The couple were married on March 12 in the Stanford Memorial Church at Stanford University, Calif. Dr. D. Elton Trueblood, the university chaplain, officiated.

The bride is the former Miss Dorothea Daphne Sorrell, daughter of Mrs. Henry Malcolm Sorrell, of Palo Alto, Calif., and formerly of Chevy Chase, Md. Lieut. Jelsma is the son of Mrs. Orilla Keichman of Montague, Calif.

Following a brief honeymoon the newlyweds left for Philadelphia. The bride, who is a senior at Stanford will return to the university in June to take her degree at the annual commencement exercises. The bridegroom has been doing graduate work in economics at Stanford, working toward a Ph. D. degree. He received his A. B. and M. A. degrees at Oklahoma A. & M. College.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

"WHY DON'T Americans like the English—and vice versa?" I asked Miss D. E. Vicaji as we sat over a cocktail the other afternoon. The well known British portrait painter and I were laughing over a recent article by an Englishwoman which said that though Americans want to help Britain in its heroic struggle, "you don't like us personally."

Miss Vicaji was regretting that so many in the United States think her countrymen are superior and condescending. "On our side," she said, "we are stunned by American enthusiasm. Americans were always dropping into my home in London and telling my friends how lovely they looked, how handsome the furniture was, and so forth. It would never occur to an English person to pay such compliments. I might think you looked well, but I'd take it for granted and not mention it."

THE VISITOR spoke of a recent tour of Yosemite. "Its beauty is staggering," she said, "so much so that it was several minutes before I could pull myself together and say anything. Meanwhile, my American friends were exclaiming about the scenery, using a new adjective every few seconds. Finally, they turned on me and said I was being superior about it—that just because I was English I couldn't appreciate anything outside my own country."

Miss Vicaji is afraid that Americans don't understand how enormously their aid to England is being appreciated over there. "It's our custom to say a thing just once and let it go at that," she continued earnestly. "I have said 'thank you' with the deepest sincerity to friends of mine in this country. But I'm afraid that if I don't say 'thank you one million, billion, trillion times' they are sure I don't really mean it."

THE ARTIST spent a few days in Washington after a visit with Mrs. Stotesbury in Palm Beach. (The latter, incidentally is due back in the Capital today.) In 1939 Miss Vicaji felt that war might break out, so returned to England to put her enormous American automobile and her services as a chauffeur at the disposal of her country. But her car was so big, and consumed so much gas, that the relief forces couldn't use it. Also, they had more volunteers than they needed at the time, so put her name on the waiting list. Miss Vicaji returned to this country, bringing with her the children of some English friends who couldn't afford to pay their passage.

She has two homes in London, in one of which the windows have been blown out and the walls shattered. Her possessions are scattered all over the map, "my silver in Surrey, my books in Essex, some paintings on the Isle of Wight, and others in this country. But what is the loss of material things when whole families have been broken up?"

Though the news from the Balkans that day had been most discouraging, Miss Vicaji was not uncheerful. "It never occurs to any of us that we aren't going to win this war," she said.

The artist has painted many notables in this country, Canada and England. "But it's not the time to have an exhibition" she said.

Home Should Be Equipped For Illness

Good Organization Shows Up at Such a Time

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

ILLNESS is rarely a pretty business but convalescence can be pure luxury if the household is forearmed for emergencies. If the ailing one is the lady of the house, that means, first of all, a capable substitute "in charge" as any home-maker knows! If there isn't anybody in the family able to assume the responsibility, then get somebody in—it may seem expensive at the time, but in the long run it will be an economy, in keeping the children well and your own important self in bed till you are fully able to take hold again without danger of a relapse.

Organization Helps

That should clear the way for an interlude of luxurious leisure that's really due a body after an illness. But in order to enjoy this interlude, the household must be organized to function smoothly and equipped to care for an invalid. As a matter of fact, the way the family runs without you is a sure give-away as to the kind of executive you are—if you're very super-super good things will run as well without you as with you. If things go in a ragged way with you, they'll practically fall apart when you let go. It doesn't quite make sense, but there you are. So it behooves a lady to organize her life effectively, for the daily routine will be pleasanter, while emergencies can be met with more fortitude

Becoming Bed Jackets

As for the equipment every household should have on hand for illness, the list isn't such a long one. But we think it should include both glamorous and sternly utilitarian items. Among the glamor numbers, we'd include frivolous (but washable) pillow cases to froth up mountains of pillows for propping up comfortably; a truly delicious blanket cover of lace and crepe or else a quilt made of flowered nightgown satin; becoming bed jackets and hair ribbons and gowns and a fancy pair of new slippers; a pretty set of breakfast tray china and a gay tray; plenty of vases for the flowers you'll surely get. Among the utilitarian "musts" for a pleasant illness are: A bed tray with legs, or even better, a floor table made to slide over the bed; a good light for reading and such like that makes no glare and is adjustable; a wash basin, a crooked glass sipper, lots of fresh towels and tissues, along with the usual quota of important unmentionables. Most of these things should be standard equipment for every household—at least for those whose owners pride themselves on never having to face a crisis in a flurry.

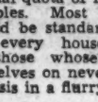
Carrot Tip

Here is something new and different in carrot seasoning: For each two cups of cooked carrots, mix in ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind and a tablespoon of honey—comb or strained. Reheat and serve.

Over the Coffee Cup

with Thos. Wilkins

Now that Bowie is open, we'll tell you how to double your money . . . fold the bill carefully and put it in your pocket.



To double your pleasure in a cup of coffee, get acquainted with Wilkins. It's the leading brand in Washington. It costs a few pennies a pound more than average coffee, but you get more pleasure per cup and more cups per pound!

Wilkins is better coffee

Suit Lead in the Easter Parade

For post-Easter days or a last-minute purchase to wear in the Sunday parade, this Hockanum flannel suit is the perfect choice. Tailored in the London manner, the simple gray chalk stripe gives it a classic feminine air. The longer jacket is cut to emphasize a gently curving slim waist. The convertible neckline may be worn high or low, according to your type. Novel slit pockets repeat the effect of the inverted pleats on the skirt. It's a suit you will find many excuses for wearing

Wedding Plans Need Thought In Advance

THE DAY that should be perfect—your wedding day! Will it be marred by nagging doubts about dress, etiquette? A thousand times no, if you've informed yourself on those puzzling little questions well in advance!

Should you carry a bouquet or a prayer book to complete the lovely picture of floating veil and formal bridal gown?

Traditionally, either is correct. But if you plan to be married informally in an afternoon frock or tailored suit, wear a corsage.

Or perhaps you wonder who's first in the receiving line at the reception. Your mother. Your father may come next, then the bridegroom's mother and father the bridegroom and you, the maid of honor and the bridesmaids. Cutting the wedding cake, remember you keep the first slice to share with the bridegroom.

No last-minute doubts about dividing expenses! Your family as host pays all costs connected with the church, entertaining. But the bridegroom pays for such items as your bouquet, the clergyman's fee.

Send 15 cents, in coins, for our booklet, "How to Plan Your Wedding," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

It's a Lucky Skirt Hanging on Lucky Skirt Hanger

It wil be a lucky skirt, indeed, which is hung on the new Lucky Skirt Hanger—an ingenious product which allows the garment to hang absolutely straight with nothing at all to produce creases, spoil pleats or otherwise mar the "bandbox look" your skirt should have.

Introduced just in time to take care of your new spring suit, this hanger is as important in keeping the shape of your skirt as a new girdle. A mere pinch of its arms contracts the hangar's shoulders so that it can be easily inserted in the skirt. As you let go, their light pressure holds the skirt firmly, automatically adjusting to waistband size, and the ends that hold the skirt are encased in rubber so that it won't slip off. There's no need for pins or clips to leave tell-tale marks. The hangar, of course, is made to hold your jacket at the same time, and you can remove one without disturbing the other.

Made of heavy wire, in gay colored enamel which has been baked so as to be chip-proof, the Lucky Skirt Hangers come in delf blue, seafoam green and May wine.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife Reports 18 Years of Neglect and Unhappiness In Marriage to Man Who Barely Speaks to Her Now; She Thinks Him Wholly Selfish and Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married 18 years and have two children,—one in high school and the other in primary school. My husband and I never have got on well together, but now we have reached a point where we scarcely speak. He has always paid attention to other women and none to me; always explaining that he is "just having fun." He never takes me out to dinner, buys me clothes or gives me anything, except food and shelter and movie money occasionally.

Yet he keeps a constant liquor supply for himself; goes South, by himself, for a vacation every year, which he cannot afford, but which his mother (who lives in the South) gives him. He doesn't want me to go along, even though my family would give me the money to go. When he takes me to a dance, as he does twice a year (to a club dance), he has one dance with me and then leaves me to shift for myself. My mother has to provide the clothing for our two children.

I am considered an attractive woman and I keep a neat house, but I am not in very good health and the home situation is bad for my nerves. Of course I am cranky at times, but I just can't help it. My doctor has said it would be best for us to separate, but my husband will not consider it. And then, too, I am not strong enough to get a job and support myself. But I couldn't be any lonelier if I left him than I am living with him.

My husband is no companion to me. I have to look elsewhere for companionship. And I do want companionship. I want someone's love and praise and appreciation. I would like to go out socially with my husband, but he doesn't want me. Sometimes when he is drinking, we get into sharp arguments, and occasionally he has struck me. When he goes out alone, he refuses to give any explanation as to where he has been.

Miss Haworth, do you think it is right for him to go out and stay out late without saying where he has been? Is it right for him to take annual vacations without me? Is it right for him to go to dances without me—even though he is on the committee—when he hasn't furnished me with the proper clothing to wear to a dance? He makes a fair salary, and we could live nicely on it if he would let me manage it. But he refuses. All he gives me is the grocery money. Please tell me what to do. S. M. C.

The Lord Helps Those Who Help Themselves

DEAR S. M. C.: No man can abide a whining wife, and your foregoing report of domestic discord is pitched to the tune of a rasping whine. Perhaps most of your trouble with your husband—including his aversion to your society, indifference to your desires, flattering attentions to other women, insistence upon a bachelor vacation every year, etc.—stems from the whining attitude you brought with you into the marriage.

The fact that your husband (who apparently gets around and has many friends and outside interests) has "put up with you" for 18 years, despite the fact that you and he "have never got on well together," suggests that there is something to be said for him on the credit side of the ledger. Because usually it is simpler for a man to walk out on his wife, than vice versa, you know. And the fact that you are half sick with outrage and self pity, as a result of his harsh indifference, yet unwilling to take bold steps to improve your own situation, suggests that you are one of those obnoxious, "poor-little-me" women who consider it somebody else's responsibility to make them happy.

One senses in the personality back of the foregoing letter, an infantile tendency to kick and scream and sulk in corners when things go wrong—on either a large or small scale. One senses a person who would make mountains out of moleholes; and I think that is literally what you have done in your marriage. No doubt you started needling your husband for small faults in the beginning, and gradually they sprouted into major vices. Yet I imagine you paired off with an average sort of citizen who, if given a different brand of wifely handling, might have settled down to being a first-class family man; an agreeable, faithful, devoted husband—ready to follow a good natured, big hearted, large minded, truly adult wife's lead in all domestic and social matters.

Your attitude toward your husband, as of today, is one of snarling resentment,—to which, naturally, he responds in kind. You can never hope to evoke from him any companionability, any show of love, any praise or appreciation, until your whole outlook has changed. And it is useless to look to him, at present, for reclamation from your condition of being dowdy, neglected, ailing, dispirited and practically penniless. As Rhett Butler told Scarlett O'Hara, he "just doesn't give a damn" about your sufferings. But at least he isn't walking out on you, as Rhett walked out on Scarlett.

My advice to you is to stay with your husband and get a job—for the income, fresh viewpoint, enlarged acquaintanceship, opportunity to "be somebody in your own right," and relief or escape from moping morbidity that it will give you. With money of your own, earned by personal effort, you can have the clothes you need to make a presentable social appearance. With the friends you make in the business world, you can contrive a program of comings-and-goings that will alleviate your erstwhile desperate desire to cling to your husband's coat tails.

And as you give evidence of ability and willingness to stand on your own feet, go your own way, and fashion your own happiness out of whole cloth, as it were, your husband will be startled into regarding you with brand-new respect and interest. When you are no longer leaning on or looking to him for everything, he will feel a greater incentive to "do" for you. And when that time comes, I suggest that you meet his slightest conciliatory overture with gracious cordiality and beaming appreciation, treating him as politely as if he were a new beau whose attention you wanted to capture and hold. (I am assuming, of course, that beneath the surface of your chronic exasperation with him, you really do care for him and yearn for his loving notice.)

Evolution of Mahogany

Mahogany is one of the most important cabinet woods, found in the West Indies, in Central and South America and in Africa. It has a red-brown color, wonderful strength, hardness, a texture adaptable for intricate carving. The Spanish explorers first brought it to Europe in the sixteenth century, but it did not become a leading cabinet wood until the eighteenth century, when it was the chief wood used by the great eighteenth century craftsmen who made the period known as the Age of Mahogany.

Bust Is Improved by Toning of Muscles

Swimming Strokes, Circling of Arms Good Exercises

By Ida Jean Kain

The only way to reduce the size of the bust is to reduce the weight generally. And the only way to improve the contour of this measurement is through exercise to tone the supporting muscles.

With excessive weight, there may appear to be an abdominal infiltration of fat in this area for the tissues are very susceptible to fatty deposit. The gradual loss of weight will tend to normalize the measurement.

But excessive weight increases the tendency of the tissues to sag, and as weight is removed, it is very important to tone skin and muscles. The specific measures are the application of cold water and exercises which move the shoulder girdle. Many famous beauties make a daily practice of dashing cold water over throat, chest and bust to maintain skin tone.

Influenced by Muscles

Since the breasts are composed of glands rather than muscle, they aren't directly affected by exercise. Certainly the measurement cannot be reduced by exercise. But the bust contour is greatly influenced by the pectorals, which are large, fan-shaped muscles spreading over each side of the chest and inserting of the upper arms.

Because of the origin and insertion of the pectorals, the movements of arms, shoulders and chest are interrelated and an exercise which helps to improve one is beneficial to the entire shoulder girdle. Excellent exercises are those in which the arms are circled or swung backward or sideward from the shoulder. That's why the back and breast strokes in swimming are such highly esteemed beauty measures. Holding the arms high overhead elevates the chest and exercises taken on a stretching bar also tend to raise the bust contour.

Whether the bust is normally broad and flat or broad and full, or low and narrow or high and round, the weight and the tonicity in skin and muscles can vary the contour from its normal.

Vitality Important

Another important factor is vitality. Usually the thin girl with a slight bust has a low vitality in addition to underdeveloped chest muscles, poor body tone and a slumped posture. She needs a general health program of outdoor exercise and a good diet along with a few specific exercises. When the bust is naturally small, however, the use of a bit of padding in the brassiere will give the desired fashionable line. The fit of the bra is very important. There are now types designed for every figure and there's no excuse for not wearing the right one.

Origin of Anti-Macassar

The ebony knows as macassar gets its name from the city in the East Indies from which it is shipped. Macassar oil, once used on men's hair, inspired the name of that household doilie, the anti-macassar, designed to protect the backs of upholstered furniture against soil from this oil.

Cops Hope You Enjoy Blossom Festival—They Don't!

By John Singerhoff
Post Staff Writer

Cherry blossom time in Washington.... a gay week-end for more than a million people—a nightmare to the local police.

The latter become a weary, unhappy lot. Their days off are taken away from them; their leave is cancelled; they work long hours that others may enjoy the Eastertime.

Even 52 rookies who will not really be policemen until next month, get a taste of it. They are detailed to the downtown area, answering endless questions while keeping an eye on out-of-town drivers, unfamiliar with Washington's traffic routes.

Special police arrangements went into effect yesterday. The rookies from the police school were stationed at downtown intersections; at Union Station, and at points around bus terminals, "being courteous and helpful."

There were 40 men in the shopping area, keeping last-minute shoppers and the thousands of automobiles that go with them, out of each other's way.

Today there will be a concentration of blue-coated troops below Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. More than 200 patrolmen from both the Metropolitan and Park Police departments will try to keep motorists and pedestrians happy with as little congestion as possible.

Every motorcycle policeman "able to ride" will be on hand Sunday and will work in a special "section" between 11 a. m. and 7 p. m.

PLAN FOR CONTROL OF CHERRY BLOSSOM TRAFFIC AROUND TIDAL BASIN

Sixty-five men will be mounted.

The entire personnel of Park Police—62 men—will work over the weekend.

Besides serving at the Cherry Blossom festival this afternoon and for Sunday's sightseers and repetition of the festival the gendarmes will have to provide protection Monday for President Roosevelt at Griffith Stadium for the opening of the American League; for the thousands who will jam the White House Grounds for the egg rolling; and for delegates to the meetings of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The uniformed patrolman will not be alone in his weariness. For the plain-clothesmen—more than 100 of them—will be charged with the prevention of pocket picking and confidence games—two crimes which fit hand in glove with crowds.

The detectives will "cover" Union Station, all bus terminals, theaters and will be on hand at every place where there will be a congestion of visitors during the festival period.

They also will provide guard for the President.

Motorists too will have their troubles if they intend to see the blossoms from their cars.

They will be allowed entrance to the Tidal Basin area via Riverside Drive, Twenty-third Street, Lincoln Memorial driveways, Jefferson Drive and Fourteenth Street. Traffic will be allowed to move as usual Saturday, Capt. Henry Helms of the Park Police said, "except probably about 2 p. m. shortly before the Queen is crowned."

Sunday, however, only one-way traffic will be allowed to flow around the Tidal Basin

Parking anywhere near the blossoms will be out of the question.

Beautiful Dumbarton Oaks Park Opens to Public

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Twenty-seven acres of exquisite natural beauty—the flowered valley of Dumbarton Oaks Park, cut with a winding watercourse through its center—will be opened to the public for the first time at 9 a. m. today.

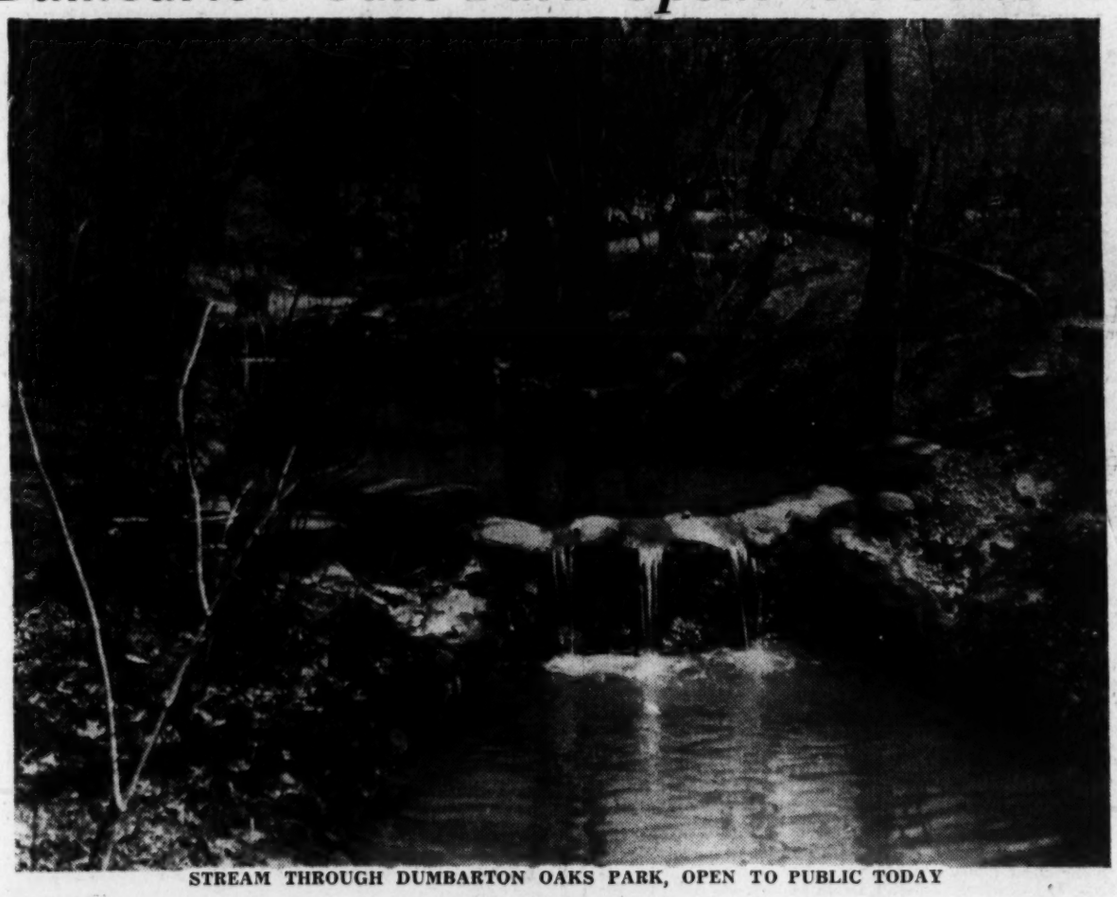
It is the latest link in the National Capital Park System and was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who in 1920 acquired the estate.

There is a quiet, ancient environment, as places in Washington go. Its mansion house was built in 1800. The mansion and its immediate grounds, a gift to Harvard University, will not be included in the public area but will predominate it and enhance its loveliness.

Already in blossom are narcissus; primroses in mixed colors; blue periwinkle and scilla; the yellow-blossomed spice bush and forsythia; lavender soulangeana magnolia and the early white-blossomed flowering plum.

The forsythia is bound to be seen. It tumbles down a hillside in rough golden waves over what seems to be an acre.

The public will approach the park down the flagstones of "Lovers' Lane," opening from the north side of R Street, between Thirtieth and Thirty-first Streets Northwest.



STREAM THROUGH DUMBARTON OAKS PARK, OPEN TO PUBLIC TODAY

JONQUILS BORDER QUIET WALKWAYS THROUGH DUMBARTON PARK

Once arrived at the gate there is a feeling, not entirely illusory, of having quit the city and arrived at a place where green wet earth can be smelled while the eyes rest on wooded hills enough distance away.

Twenty-seven acres is considerable land. It doesn't all rise to the eye from the gate. The size only becomes apparent as one of several paths, taken up at the gate, follows the water course.

There is a series of tiny waterfalls and their rollings and splashings arise very clearly because not a sound from the car-filled, jittery streets is to be heard in there. Nothing can be heard but the waterfalls and birds, among which were partridges (the bob whites) and a few crows, curiously in a city's limits!

One can sit, if in the notion, in peaceful contemplation on distinguished benches. Little metal plates indicate the bench wood is of teak and formerly was a part of H. M. S. Weymouth.

The whole area is landscaped. Credit for much of the beauty is given on a plaque in a summerhouse. The dedication is to William James Gray, superintendent of Dumbarton Oaks, 1922-1937.

And there is a line: "Woods and Groves Have Felt Thy Blessing."

The park will be open tomorrow and Monday.

Those Playful Yeggs

Playful yeggmen yesterday raided a valet shop at 1432 New York Avenue Northwest. When a safe, containing $500, proved too tough to crack, they hid it.

Hyman Zoslow, proprietor, called police to report the safe stolen. A search revealed it buried under a pile of debris in the cellar, its combination hacked off.

Marvels of Science

Last January 27 Mrs. Kathryn McMillan, 100 South Brook Lane, Bethesda, Md., reported a $65 watch and her fur coat missing. The coat was recovered, and a suspect found guilty of its theft. The watch didn't turn up until yesterday—ten weeks later. A member of Mrs. McMillan's family found the timepiece hanging in the front yard hedge—on time and running.

Congress To Get Five District Bills

No Controversial Measures Included; Rent Hearings Planned Next Week

Five District bills, including a measure to give the police property clerk authority to settle disputes over ownership of recovered stolen goods, will be considered by the House when it ends a ten-day recess on District Day Monday.

In announcing his program, Chairman Randolph of the District Committee yesterday recalled his agreement with House leaders April 3 that he would call up no controversial legislation.

Must Defer Action

Many members of the House are expected to delay their return to the city for several days. Randolph observed that it will be necessary to defer committee action on two major pieces of District legislation.

Hearings on the Randolph rents-control bill, he said, will be resumed by the District Subcommittee on National Defense the latter part of next week.

Sometime the following week, he stated, the full District Committee will be called together to consider the Overton formula for determining the Federal Government's share of municipal expenses.

In addition to the property clerk bill, Randolph said he would call up measures to:

Authorize $62-a-month retirement pay for Charlotte E. Hunter, a teacher in the public schools from 1895 to 1919.

For Hospital Building

Permit the American Red Cross to construct $75,000 in facilities at St. Elizabeths Hospital to replace a $37,000 building destroyed by fire February 4.

Authorize the Federal Security Administration to accept gifts for Freedmen's Hospital.

Police Unfair To Bandits, One Complains

Stephen T. Povich, 23-year-old robbery suspect who was wounded in a gun fight with a policeman Thursday, was questioned at Emergency Hospital by detectives yesterday. He said:

He spoke of the ambush into which he walked at a filling station at Maine Avenue and Seventh Street Southwest, and of Policeman John L. Sullivan, 31, Fourth Precinct.

"He shot without warning," Povich complained to Detective Sergts. E. E. Thompson and J. J. Tolson, of the robbery squad, yesterday, from his hospital bed.

Last night police announced ten persons identified a picture of Povich as that of the man who had staged holdups at their places of business. Others said they thought the picture was of the right man, but would not make a positive identification.

The suspect told the detectives that he was struck by Sullivan's second shot. He said he did not remember when he fired, because "he was in a daze." He told the detectives he did not remember fleeing the gas station nor being taken to the hospital.

He refused to answer questions regarding some 30 other early morning gas station holdups, it was said.

Sullivan shot the man after he held up Howard Edwards, 21, attendant at the station, and robbed him of $15. The policeman was "planted" in the washroom and said he fired on the bandit when the latter aimed a revolver at him.

Meanwhile, police kept in custody two men who identified themselves as "friends" of Povich and a 27-year-old cab driver who confessed driving the getaway car. None had been charged last night and investigators marked time pending the outcome of Povich's wounds.

Police said neither of the two Povich "friends" was identified at last night's lineup.

Drunk Driver Is Murderer, U. S. Contends

A drunken driver found guilty of killing a person while driving recklessly in the District should be convicted of second-degree murder, the United States Government said in a brief filed in the Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday.

The argument was advanced by the District Attorney's office in the second-degree murder conviction of Richard S. Nestlerode, 28-year-old Missouri laborer who was sentenced to a term of from 15 years to life imprisonment after a District court jury found him guilty of the traffic death of Joseph Nappo, 59, last June.

Nestlerode has appealed his conviction.

Justice James W. Morris sentenced Nestlerode on November 15, 1940. The brief entered in the appellate court was signed by District Attorney Edward M. Curran and Assistant United States Attorneys Arthur B. Caldwell, Charles B. Murray and Bernard Margolius.

In discussing the merits of the case the Government said in its brief:

"Today, when men drive automobiles, which are generally recognized to be dangerous instrumentalities, recklessly and wantonly along highways and through crowded streets of densely populated cities—where human beings are ordinarily expected to be—a killing must be deemed a natural and probable result to be anticipated.

"When a homicide follows as a consequence of such conduct, a criminal intent is imputed to the offender, and he may be punished for his crime. The precise grade of such a homicide, whether murder, manslaughter, or some lesser offense, depends upon the facts of the particular case."

Memories of Big Names Rise With Dust as Wreckers Work

By George Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

Gold braid and splendor of embassy parties, the confidential conversation of a President and party henchmen—shades of these, and the reality of moving day for three 1941 OPM workers, rose in the dust of a wrecking crew on Sixteenth Street, between K and L Northwest yesterday.

The wrecking crew was slashing down the first of five mansions to make way for an $8,500,000 Statler Hotel.

The ultra-modern hotel, according to announcement, will include 1,000 rooms, a ballroom with a capacity of 2,000, and a "Peacock Alley" to be known as Capitol Terrace.

But long before these are occupied the last vestiges of the old homes and the "how are the mighty fallen" atmosphere—like the pile of rubble in the ballroom of the Hale mansion—will have been swept away.

All but the first floor of this residence at the northeast corner of Sixteenth and K Streets had been torn down yesterday. Workmen pried plaster loose from the naked walls and crashed bricks into the front lawn where the Doric columns of the portico already lay.

Not so long ago the home was frequented by others than the employes of the wrecking crew. For more than a half century it had been the property of the late Senator Eugene Hale, of Maine, then of his son, former Senator Frederic Hale, who vacated his Congressional seat last January.

Next door, its windows smashed and interior gutted, a graystone structure stands shell-like around a fast dissolving pattern of marble staircase, dining hall, and ball room. It is No. 1013, the former home of the late Senator Couzens, of Michigan.

Before Couzens lived there the mansion was the home of Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, and it was at this time that President Harding was a frequent visitor at the residence.

Before that Chilean and Brazilian Embassies made it their headquarters; that was its gold-braid era.

More recently it had housed the American Trucking Association. The fountain in a small cloistered garden remains undisturbed.

Dr. Charles Marbury, prominent Washington internist, who moved out of the next residence, 1015 Sixteenth Street, only recently, said he had left his home with reluctance.

"It had many attachments," remarked the physician who has moved to a Massachusetts Avenue house. "But," he added, "Sixteenth Street is a rather good place to get away from now."

The only inhabited house in the block is No. 1017. Once the Venezuelan Legation, it is a rooming house now. The remaining roomers, three girls from the OPM and an Army major, will leave Monday evening and the wreckers will come in Wednesday.

"This is no evacuation" said Mrs. Joseph Walling, the landlady, and Orma Ewing Adams, New York and Washington radio singer, who was helping dispose of the furniture. "They're not being kicked out."

As for Mrs. Walling, she for one is not sorry at her departure from the 1000 block of Sixteenth Street Northwest. "I'm not sorry to leave this burg. I'm going back to New York where people are people, not inmates" she told The Post.

Boys' Club Offers Ducks To Good Egg Painters

Two live ducks will be awarded as first prize in an egg-decorating contest sponsored by the Washington Boys Club Eastern Branch at Seventeenth and Massachusetts Avenue Southeast this afternoon. Eggs will be judged as handsomest and funniest.

At least 40 boys are expected to enter eggs inthe contest, which will open a week of Easter activities at the club. Entries will be put on display at 10 a. m. and will be judged at 2 p. m. Besides the ducks, the first prize winner will receive a duck hotel and yard, while the second prize will be a toy Donald Duck.

Five-Day Weather Forecast Given

The Weather Bureau last night made its five-day weather forecast as follows: Middle Atlantic States, including the District—Fair, mild weather will continue Saturday and Sunday with weather becoming cloudy Monday, followed by light showers Tuesday and showers and cooler Wednesday. Temperatures will average considerably above normal for the next five days.

Brightwood Citizens Urge Express Bus

Brightwood Citizens Association last night urged express bus service on Thirteenth Street Northwest to provide through transportation for residents of that area to the downtown section.

The request was specifically designed to solve transit difficulties for citizens in the sector bounded by Madison, Whittier, Sixteenth Street and Georgia Avenue. Members pointed to present congestion on Sixteenth and Madison Street routes.

Elmer Johnson, chairman of a special transportation committee, was instructed to consult with the Capital Transit Co. and the Public Utilities Commission on this matter after a petition bearing more than 150 names was presented by Miss Gertrude M. Robinson.

The following traffic developments resulting from past association action were reported at the meeting:

The Department of Vehicles and Traffic notified the unit it had on its agenda for "early proposal" the establishment of parking on only one side of Madison Street between Georgia Avenue and Thirteenth Street Northwest. The street at this point is but 30 feet in width.

Also on the Traffic Department's future program is the installation of traffic lights at the intersection of Georgia, Kansas and Iowa Avenues and Upshur Street Northwest. Because of the Brightwood citizens request for light control at this intersection, the department said it would act as soon as appropriations were available.

The Public Utilities Commission notified the unit it had referred to the District Bureau of Engineering a proposal for a northbound safety zone opposite the northbound streetcar stop on Georgia Avenue at Concord Street.

The unit met at the home of Johnson, 831 Rittenhouse Street Northwest. Members had assembled at the usual meeting place, Paul Junior High School, only to find the building closed because of Good Friday.

Reverent D. C. Marks Good Friday

Observance Is Shadowed by War; Throngs Attend Union Services

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Solemn reminders that Christ died for man's sins and that the modern war-torn world is again "crucifying" Him sounded yesterday in scores of churches as Christendom observed Good Friday.

In sacred three-hour rites that began at noon and in cantatas, pageants and passion plays last night the tragedy of Golgotha was unfolded before thousands of the faithful.

Following Holy Saturday services, marking the burial of Christ, worshipers will arise on Easter to commemorate the most joyous event in the Christian calendar—the Resurrection of the Saviour.

Meanwhile, with the war swirling nearer to the Holy Land, pilgrims observed Good Friday in Jerusalem, cradle of Christianity, by retracing Christ's route from prison to Calvary.

The Holy Land observed the day with fervent prayers for peace.

Pilgrims walked the path taken by Christ in the narrow, sacred Via Dolorosa and prayed at stations of the cross leading from the scene of his prison along the winding lane into the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, his last stop before mounting Calvary.

The procession along the cobblestoned lane in the afternoon was swollen by thousands of jostling pilgrims who wept as they paused and knelt at each of the successive stations of the pre-crucifixion journey.

Although the Greek Eastertide begins later under the Eastern church's calendar, prayers were said by many on this Easter in behalf of the invaded Hellenes.

Funeral Reenacted

More than 1,500 worshipers of many faiths and creeds mingled last night in the hush of the Franciscan Monastery, where the funeral procession of Jesus Christ was again portrayed.

Marching in the center of the procession to the Holy Sepulchre were four Knights of Mount St. Sepulchre. They bore the waxen image of Christ, with hands, feet and side blood-stained. Acolytes carried nails, spears and a crown of thorns—implements of the Crucifixion.

As the figure was placed in the sepulchre, symbolizing His burial place, seals were applied. They will be removed tomorrow.

The Rev. Herbert Gallagher, O. F. M., vice commissary of the monastery, conducted the services, and the Rev. Hilry Sellinger delivered the sermon.

Many denominations yesterday sponsored city-wide services for their members, among them the Methodists. They met at Foundry Methodist Church, where clergymen of four denominations preached on "The Seven Last Words (statements) on the Cross."

They were Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Bishop of the Washington area, Methodist Church; Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, of First Baptist Church; Dr. Calvin H. Wingert, Grace Reformed; Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church and president of the Washington Federation of Churches, and Dr. William R. Barnhart, Federation executive secretary.

Also Dr. G. Ellis Williams and Dr. Edgar C. Beery, District superintendent of the Methodist Church; Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, host pastor; Dr. William A. Haggerty, Rosedale Methodist, and the Rev. Edwin A. Ross, of St. Paul's Methodist Church, Kensington, Md. The service was sponsored by the Methodist Union.

The "Seven Last Words"

The historic "Seven Last Words," which have inspired countless sermons, hymns, anthems and cantatas, are: "Father, Forgive Them, for They Know Not What They Do"; "Today Shalt Thou Be With Me in Paradise"; "Women, Behold Thy Son!"; "My God! My God! Why Hast Thou Forsaken Me?"; "I Thirst," and "It Is Finished."

While many people remained for the entire services in churches, some stayed just for their lunch hours, especially downtown business workers, many of whom were excused for services. A special committee of religious, civic and business leaders made that request to employers. Some stores closed for the three-hour rites. Many soldiers were excused for services here and at posts.

Lutherans of the city met for joint rites at Grace and Keller Memorial Lutheran Churches; Southeast congregations worshiped at North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, and churches of the Bloomingdale section at Memorial United Brethren Church.

Services in Park

Sunny weather drew hundreds of Catholics and members of other faiths to the "Everybody's Good Friday service" in Franklin Park, Fourteenth and K Streets Northwest. It was sponsored by the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild.

Men, women and children grouped in front of the platform and seated on the benches heard the Stations of the Cross conducted by priests from Catholic University. A choir of the university's religious students sang.

The Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, where the mass of the presanctified was held yesterday, today at 6:30 a. m. will be the scene of the blessing of the Easter candle and the new fire. The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Bishop of Bilta and university rector, will celebrate a pontifical mass there tomorrow at 11 a. m. The Rev. John J. Reilly, Shrine director, will preach.

Jewry Marks Egypt Exodus At Rites Here

The Israelites' exodus from bondage in Egypt was commemorated last night in the homes of Washington Jewry, as the Feast of the Passover began.

Essential part of the Seder feasts was the matzos, unleavened bread, eaten during the eight-day holiday to symbolize that when the Jewish people fled to Palestine they took only the flour that had been prepared for the next day's baking.

In one phase of the service, heads of families placed half a matzos under a cloth, meanwhile reminding that "this is the bread of affliction which our ancestors ate in the land of Egypt."

In addition to family services, other Seder rites were held last night at the Hebrew Travelers Sheltering Society, 407 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and at the Hebrew Home for the Aged.

Services also were sponsored for Jewish patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital. The Hebrew Sisters Aid Circle donated Passover food for them. The menu consisted of gefuilte fish, roast chicken, hard boiled eggs, candy, matzos, cookies, oranges and apples.

The Washington Hebrew Congregation had Seder services last night under the leadership of Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld. Many worshipers attended other services in orthodox synagogues.

Ken Chase Goes Route as Nats Beat Phils, 4-1

Left-Hander Gives 6 Hits, 1 a Homer

Youngster Wild But Looks Good; Chapman, Travis Lead Bat Attack

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Martinsville, Va., April 11.—Ken Chase popped up with an unscheduled nine-inning pitching job in this furniture manufacturing town this afternoon and behind him the Nats beat the Phillies, 4 to 1. Twelve hundred natives, released from their work by a baseball-minded mayor who declared the occasion a half holiday, saw the game.

Chase, in becoming the first Washington pitcher to go the full nine-inning run, did a clever job of it, holding the Phils to six hits, five of them singles. Originally he had been scheduled to pitch only seven innings, but he volunteered to stay in the box.

However, it was not until the Nats put the slug on Ike Pearson, Philly pitcher, in the seventh inning that Chase had a lead. To that point he was training on the empty end of a 1-0 score. But Pearson, who pitched seven innings, pitched one inning too long. The Nats scored all of their runs with a four-hit outburst in the seventh.

Chapman Paces Attack

Ben Chapman collected three of the Nats eight hits, with Travis making two. Washington's only extra base blow was Travis' double to left in the eighth.

Chase was wild. Lack of control had him in trouble in seven of the nine innings, but he tightened cleverly and though walking seven batters never passed more than one in any inning. In each of the last three innings the first man to face Chase singled, but the left-hander bore down to hold the Phils scoreless.

The only run he did give up was simply acquired by the Phils. Left-fielder Danny Litwhiler simply hit a pitch out of the park in the fourth inning to give the Phils their 1-0 lead. It was a long drive over the leftfield wall.

The Nats were a puerile crew for six innings against Pearson. Chapman singled in the first inning and Bloodworth singled in the second, and those were the only hits by the Washingtons until the seventh when all of a sudden they roused themselves.

Chapman, Lewis Single

Chapman opened the seventh with a stinging single through the box and it was the first of three successive hits. Buddy Lewis followed with a single to right, and Cecil Travis contributed a single to center that tied the score at 1-1 before anybody was out. The Nats' second run scored under the most peculiar circumstances. Jimmy Bloodworth's third strike was a swing at a ball pitched into the dirt and when it rolled to the backstop, Lewis scored and Bloodworth reached first. Travis, who reached third on the play, scored a bit later on Case's single to right.

Tom Hughes, late of Baltimore, pitched the last two innings for the Phils and held the Nats scoreless despite two hits in the eighth. Chapman singled and Travis doubled in that inning, but Travis' blow occurred with the bases empty because Chapman had been caught stealing on the previous pitch.

The Nats' victory gave them an even break in four exhibition games with the Phils. They parted company after the game, with the Nats returning to Washington and the Philadelphia club also moving home.

Monkton, Md., April 11.—Blockade, a big son of Man O' War owned by C. E. Tuttle, of Baltimore County, topped a field of ten named today for the thirty-third running tomorrow of the My Lady's Manor point-to-point, opening Maryland's spring steeplechase season.

Blockade, sold last winter by Mrs. E. Read Beard, will be ridden tomorrow by J. Fred Colwill, who piloted the chestnut hunter to three victories in the famous Maryland Hunt Cup.

Others named for the My Lady's Manor were: William F. Cochran, jr.'s, Adaigo, John Strawbridge's Coq Bruyere, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Buck's Espadin, Louis A. Randall's Monte R., Mrs. William F. Cochran, jr.'s, Ibn Zah, C. E. Tuttle's Friction, Mrs. Stuart S. Janney, jr.'s, Vaunt, Edward S. Voss' Ven Hill, and Stuart S. Janney, jr.'s, Winton.

The race will be run over a steeplechase course of about 3 miles on the estates of Leslie F. Kieffer and J. Myers Pearce.

Thirteen timber-toppers were named for the John Rush Streett Memorial Steeplechase, to follow My Lady's Manor over the same course.

Griff Unveils His Nats Here This Afternoon

Up from the South with a record of 15 victories in 22 exhibition games, the Nats present themselves for Griffith Stadium fans' inspection today with the Baltimore Orioles as the opposition.

The Washington team was scheduled to pile out of its Pullman berths at 6:30 a. m. Manager Bucky Harris will send young Walter Masterson to the mound this afternoon. It will be the 1941 unveiling in Griffith Stadium of "the new Masterson." The bespectacled young righthander comes up from the South hailed as a regular member of the Nats' staff after showing evidence that he has developed control of his fast ball.

First Glimpse of Archie

For Washington fans the game will present their first glimpse of George Archie, Coast League rookie who has inherited the Nats' first base job.

Harris will place on the field today the team that on Monday will open the season against the Yankees behind the pitching of Dutch Leonard.

A New Outfield

It will be the Griffith Stadium debut of the 1941 Washington outfield. Chapman is reappearing in a Washington uniform after a four-year absence, and Roger Cramer makes his bow as a member of the Nats after ten years with the Athletics and Red Sox.

In only two positions is it the same Washington team that bowed out of Griffith Stadium last September—behind the bat where Ferrell is catching, and at second base where Bloodworth is a fixture.

Buddy Lewis has moved from the outfield to third base, Cecil Travis has been shunted from third to shortstop, Archie is a new first baseman, and Case, the only relic of the 1940 outfield, is now playing right instead of center.

Orioles Defeat Red Sox, 5 to 4

Baltimore, April 11 (AP).—The Baltimore Orioles, of the International League, rallied for three runs in the ninth inning today to defeat the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 4, in an exhibition game. The Orioles outhit the American Leaguers, 12 to 10.

Earl Johnson, who relieved Jack Wilson on the mound for Boston, was the victim of the Orioles' ninth-inning outburst and had managed to get only one man out when the winning run was scored.

Doerr's Injury Slight, To Play in Opener

Boston, April 11 (AP).—Bobby Doerr, Boston Red Sox second baseman, who suffered a left thumb injury in Cincinnati yesterday, returned to Boston today for examination and discovered he would be able to play in the opening game with Washington Tuesday.

Doerr, who feared he had suffered a thumb fracture, was examined by Dr. Thomas K. Richards, Red Sox physician, who said the injury was only a bad bruise.

Reds Picked as Team To Beat for Pennant

69 of 83 Scribes Choose Cincinnati To Repeat as National League Champion

By the Associated Press

New York, April 11.—The spring storm stirred up by the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers as potential pennant winners in the National League turned out to be just a harmless zephyr to the sports writers.

The Cincinnati Reds were chosen today to repeat in the senior circuit by 69 of 83 scribes in major league cities who participated in the annual preseason poll of the Associated Press.

Of the remainder, an even dozen bunched together on Brooklyn and exactly two came out for the Cardinals.

This would seem to indicate that the writers at last have agreed that the current world champions are a solid ball club. Last year St. Louis received a slight edge in the canvass in spite of the fact that the Reds had won in 1939.

Reds Team to Beat

This year they left no doubt that Cincinnati has the team to beat. Thirteen of the 14 dissenters on a third-straight championship for the Reds picked them to finish second and the other placed them third.

On a point basis, with 8 for a first-place vote, 7 for second, 6 for third, etc., the Reds received a total of 649 points.

The Dodgers, who were picked for every place from first to sixth, obtained 558 points, 51 more than the Redbirds, whose vote was spread from first to seventh, but skipped the sixth-place slot.

Beneath this triumvirate there was a considerable variety of opinion except on the Phillies, whom 80 of the 83 writers frankly figured to land in the cellar for the fourth straight year.

Place Giants Everywhere

Based on total points, the vote forecast the entire league would wind up in the same order it finished last year. But the New York Giants were spotted in every position except first and the Pittsburgh Pirates in every bracket except first and last.

For the first time in many years the Boston Bees did not receive a single sentence to the cellar, and in polling 203 points they gave the Giants, with 268, a good run for sixth place.

Results of the poll, including the number of votes for each team for each place, and the total points figured on an 8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis:

Fate of Nat Broadcasts Still in Doubt

Apparently somewhat irked by the delay, Owner Clark Griffith of the Washington Baseball Club last night admitted the final decision on whether the Nats' games would be broadcast this year would not be made until today.

A lengthy powwow with interested parties last night, starting at 8:30 and lasting until almost midnight, developed nothing definite, the genial president said. The same group will convene today, after which the fate of Arch McDonald's daily descriptions will be known.

Though Station WJSV handled the broadcasts last year, its representative was not present at last night's confab. A spokesman for WMAL was the only radioman on hand, though both General Mills, last year's cosponsor, and L. P. Steuart, Inc., local auto sales company, had representatives at the meeting.

Whether the broadcasts are to be continued depends entirely on the financial arrangements made by Griffith with the last remaining station to show an interest, WMAL, and the two sponsors left in the running. Griffith has agreed to take a cut in the $30,000 which was his share last year, but even at that the broadcast will necessitate approximately $55,000.

N.B.C. to Sue For Garden Broadcasts

N. Y. Supreme Court To Get Suit Against M.B.S., 20th Century Club, Gillette Razor

By the Associated Press

New York, April 11.—The National Broadcasting Co. announced today it was filing suit in State Supreme Court against the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, the Mutual Broadcasting System and the Gillette Safety Razor Co., over the question of the broadcasting of prize fights from Madison Square Garden.

M. B. S. recently announced that it has signed up with Mike Jacobs, of the Sporting Club, and the Gillette Co., as sponsor, to take over the fight broadcasts effective June 1. For the last four years, and previous to that under various sponsors, N.B.C. has been carrying the fights under a regular schedule with the sponsorship of Adam Hats.

N. B. C. said the action against the sporting club was to compel it "to perform an agreement" by which N. B. C. was granted the exclusive right to broadcast bouts staged by Twentieth Century in the Garden between October 1, 1941, and June 1, 1942.

M. B. S. and Gillette are included in the suit, N. B. C. added, "to restrain them from seeking to enforce an agreement which they claim they made with Twentieth Century in March whereby they were granted exclusive right to broadcast said bouts."

M. B. S. said in a statement that it signed a contract to broadcast the fights after investigation showed that a purported oral agreement N. B. C. said it made with Jacobs did not actually exist. M. B. S. quoted Jacobs as denying such an agreement.

Whirlaway Wins, Boosts Derby Stock

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., April 11.—Calumet Farm's Whirlaway, a big disappointment during the Florida season, leaped back into the Kentucky Derby picture at Keeneland this afternoon as he accounted for the A. J. Joyner Handicap, a dash at three-quarters.

Far back in the early running, the son of imported Blenheim II got up in the last jump of a stirring stretch drive to nose out C. V. Vanmeter's Blue Pair, another ranking candidate for the race of roses at Churchill Downs on May 3. Third money in the field of five went to W. E. Smith's My Bill, which was not nominated for the Derby. Valdina Groom and Alaking trailed in that order.

It was My Bill which unexpectedly set the pace for the big Derby pair. Blue Pair was running in second place and Whirlaway in fourth as they raced down the backstretch.

Turning for home, Blue Pair charged on the leader and Whirlaway followed suit. In a ding-dong finish Whirlaway stuck his nose out right at the wire.

Whirlaway was conceding Blue Pair 4 pounds. A prohibitive favorite, he paid $4 for each $2 win ticket. He was timed the 6 furlongs in 1:11 3-5.

Skip Alexander And Strafaci Golf Finalists

By the United Press

Pinehurst, N. C., April 11.—Skip Alexander, of Durham, and Frank Strafaci, of New York, meet tomorrow in the 36-hole finals of the North and South amateur championship in what probably will be their last major competition until they get out of the Army.

Alexander, former Duke golf star, who will enter the Army at the end of the present school term, provided the major upset of the North-South today when he eliminated Dick Chapman, the medalist and national amateur champion, 6 and 5, in the quarter-finals.

A few hours later Alexander defeated Bobby Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C., 4 and 2, in the semifinals.

Strafaci, former metropolitan champ who won the North-South in 1938 and 1939, beat Harold Williams, of Alabama, this morning, 2 and 1, and in the semifinals this afternoon holed out three chip shots to defeat Walter Burkemo, of Chicago, 3 and 2. Strafaci plans to volunteer for the Army as soon as he returns to New York.

Alexander gave Chapman a two-hole margin at the end of the third hole but the national champion's putting touch deserted him and Skip turned on the heat. He won five consecutive holes to go into the turn three-up, and closed the match on the thirteenth by taking a three while Chapman carded a five. Alexander was one under par at the end of nine holes with a 35, and Chapman was one over.

Jamaica Course Opens Race Season Today

By the Associated Press

New York, April 11.—The gallant gallopers come back to New York tomorrow as Jamaica gets the Empire State's seven-month turf campaign under way with a seven-race program headlining some Kentucky Derby eligibles and featuring the 35-year-old Paumonok Handicap.

From the time the Long Island track unveils its new "face"—the result of a rebuilding program—until the sport of kings, queens and just ordinary citizens heads back to the Southland again next November, this State will have continuous racing, and all signs now point to the most profitable season yet.

Some 30,000 of the faithful (and hopeful) are expected to be on hand when Starter George Cassidy calls "come on" for the first race, at 2:15 p. m. (E. S. T.).

As usual, the opening day program is largely Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons. Although he's keeping his top 3-year-old, Bold Irishman, in the barn for future reference, Trainer Fitz entered his No. 2 Derby hope, King Cole, not only in the 6-furlong Paumonok, but in the Cedarmoore Handicap for 3-year-olds as well.

Pretty Miss Solves Caddy Problem

When Mary Thomas goes out for a round of golf at the Chamberlin Country Club, Old Point Comfort, Va., these spring days her caddy problems are solved by Kim, her white collie, who is hitched to a special two-wheeled cart carrying the clubs

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

SOUTHLAND RESUME:

Martinsville, Va., April 11.—Seven weeks in the South come to an end for your correspondent tomorrow and these are some items we noted:

THE MOST WORRIED MANAGER: Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees. On his face is the strain of the infield shifts he is making and the fear that he may not be picking the best of the wealth of young pitchers.

POVICH

THE MOST IMPROVED BALL PLAYER, SECOND BASEMAN: Jimmy Bloodworth, of the Nats, who has learned how to break for a batted ball, and somehow found some new speed on the bases. He is also laying off the low outside pitch, with which they used to make a sucker of him.

BEST YOUNG PITCHER: He's Frank (Rube) Melton, of the Phils, who came up from Columbus in the American Association. He showed the Nats a beaut of a curve ball, a blazing fast one and control when he struck out five of them in three innings the other day.

MOST AMAZING COME-BACKS: They are being made by two 37-year-old second basemen, Charley Gehringer and Buddy Myer, who are not acting their age. Neither of them has registered a physical complaint and they are getting around with the best of rookies.

THE WORST SLUMP—By Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, who can't buy a home run this spring and who haven't hit one between them in seven games played by the Tigers against the Nats. Greenberg is worried, York is worried, Manager Del Baker is worried, and if the Tigers as a whole aren't worried they ought to be.

MOST COURAGEOUS GUY—He's George Archie, Washington rookie first baseman who was written out of camp and virtually released as a flop when he started to play great ball and won back the first base job. He had no alibis, but there was a glint in his eye in those early days when he wasn't hitting.

MOST OUT OF SHAPE PLAYER—He's Buck Newsom, who refused to get on the scales when he reported to the Tigers' camp, but his three chins were a dead give away. He's still 15 pounds overweight.

BEST CRACK OF SEASON—By the fan in Miami Beach who didn't like the umpiring. When the loud speaker blared at the end of the fourth inning: "No hits, no runs," our leather lunged friend added, "Yes and no umpire."

STRANGEST DEVELOPMENT—Cecil Travis' sudden transformation from a poke hitter into left field to a long distance power hitter to right, as testified by his four exhibition game homers, all of them over distant rightfield fences.

BIGGEST FLOP—Outfielder Joe Mellendeck, of the Nats, who was supposed to give Ben Chapman a battle for the left-field job, and was unable to foul a ball when he was in the lineup. Back to Charlotte.

FREAKIEST PLAY—That home run by Mickey Livingston, of the Phillies, who scrambled all the way around bases on his fly ball into right field because George Case found himself securely hooked to the wiring of the fence, where his spikes had caught.

MOST HORRIBLE PERFORMANCE—By Jimmy Bloodworth in a game against the Giants at Miami, where (1) he was doubled off first base on a short foul pop over the infield, (2) failed to cover first base on a bunt and (3) crashed into Center Fielder Roger Cramer, causing the latter to drop a short fly he had been waiting patiently to catch. Bloodworth's big mistake that day, however, was in showing up at the park.

NEATEST TRICK OF THE SPRING—George's Case's attempt to score from second base after the catch of a pop fly to the shortstop. It didn't work but it had all the elements of a surprise.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

"Hey Rube"

New York, April 11.—"We had a swell soccer team," the man told us, straightening out his red balloon nose, and adjusting the tiny fedora which sat on top of his grotesque papier-mache skull. His eyes, set deep in a face that was painted white with huge black lips, brightened at the memory of the team. He was utterly oblivious to his make-up.

CONSIDINE

"I still get mail, asking us to play," Lou Jacobs, the veteran Ringling Brothers & Barnum & Bailey clown continued. "We played everywhere we went, everywhere. And they all wanted us to come back. But it's a little tough to keep a good soccer team in the circus. One year you come up with a natural, and you know he's just the fellow you need. But the next year they drop his acrobatic act, or whatever he's in, and you have to start building all over again." Jacobs kicked regretfully at his 12-sizes-too-large pants, which hung disconsolately down around his shins.

"Anyway, we had to give up this year. Some of the acts were dropped, causing us to lose key players. Other players left the show and went back to the old country, so we disbanded. But there's still a lot of sports left under the big top," he said.

We soon found that the great old clown and soccer enthusiast was right. Pat Valdo, the circus' personnel chief, who dresses like a field marshal in the panzer brigade of the Good Humor Ice Cream Co. was kind enough to lead us around the unbelievably bizarre back-stage of the great show, and introduce us to this or that former athlete who graduated from sports to the super sports spectacle which is the big show.

Tightrope Walker Was Basketball Player

That was how we met Hubert Castle, who has more inherent finesse and quick strength and balance than any standard athlete you could name. "Castle in the Air" they bill him. He is one of the all-time greats of the tight wire. He does two things no one ever did on a wire—a backward somersault through a small hoop, and a somersault from a trapeze down the wire.

He is a young, curly-headed blond from Enid Okla., the town which produced Sherman Billingsley, the man whose great New York pub, the Stork Club, has developed hundreds of tight rope walkers. Castle was known throughout Oklahoma as a basketball player, in high school, and was headed for Oklahoma A. and M., as a wrestler, when his father bought a circus and took Hubert along on the road. He had been a tumbler in school and, like lot of kids, had erected a tight rope in his back yard. He soon was the star of the old man's show, and now he is one of the many stars of the greatest show on earth.

"I train pretty much like a prize-fighter," he told us, while he stood wet with perspiration in his dressing room after his 7½-minute act. "I have to watch the diet and get a lot of the equivalent of road work. I play on one of the softball teams we've got. We've got a bunch of teams: Performers, clowns, tractors, cook house, lights, big top, props and so on. The place is baseball crazy. Everybody plays the baseball pools. We have a lot of golf competition, too, and all of a sudden there's badminton craze. That's not hard to understand, though. We can rig up our nets on any lot we play on. There are a lot of boxers around, too. I box nearly every day."

Former Fighter With Show

We met one of them. He is Joe Remillette, one of the husky "catchers" in the terrific concello aerial act. He is beautifully proportioned and looks young for a fellow who retired from the ring in 1922 after 75 heavyweight fights. He laughed when I told him so. "Maybe I ought to come back and fight Louis; everybody else is," he said.

We were interrupted by a girl dressed as a chicken, who waddled up to Pat Valdo and made some inquiry about her Social Security card. Valdo then introduced us to Miss Betty Hores, a handsome young lady who was dressed like a white Persian cat. She told us that she used to swim for the St. George's Dragon Club of Brooklyn, and held the New York State A. A. U. 100-yard breast stroke championship in 1937.

We were about to leave the place when we ran into our friend, Dick Kroner, the keeper whom Gargantua has been planning to murder for years. We asked him if old pickle puss had learned any new tricks. Kroner shrugged helplessly. "He just says to hell with it when I try to teach him something new."

Dodgers Are Beaten Before 13,097 in Brooklyn; Chicubs Nosed by White Sox

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., April 11.—Four Cleveland home runs and Bob Feller's fine hurling gave the Indians a 7-to-1 triumph today over their traditional spring rivals, the New York Giants.

The Iowa speedball artist held the Giants to four hits and one run in his seven-inning chore, the last before he takes the mound to open the American League season for Cleveland next Tuesday. Joe Heving pitched a hitless eighth and ninth.

Outfielder Gerald Walker lined homers in the first and fifth innings, driving in five runs. Round-trippers in the second inning by Outfielder Roy Weatherly and Catcher Gene Deasutels accounted for the other two Cleveland tallies. All the blows were against Southpaw Cliff Melton, who was relieved by Hal Schumacher after hurling seven frames.

Yanks Beat Dodgers

Brooklyn, April 11 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers, who had beaten the Yankees four straight on the road, fell down on the job in their first appearance before the home folks today. Charley Keller's second home run of the afternoon, with two out in the ninth, gave the American Leaguers a 7-6 victory before a crowd of 13,097.

Keller hit his deciding four-bagger off Bill Swift, who had come in to check the Yanks in the seventh after they had scored four runs off Tex Carleton. Selkirk opened the ninth with a single to center, but Swift appeared to have got himself out of the hole when DiMaggio hit into a double play. Keller was the next man up and promptly whaled the ball over the scoreboard.

Cubs Nose Out Chisox

Chicago, April 11 (AP).—The rejuvenated Chicago Cubs, making their first home start under Manager Jimmy Wilson, eked out a 2-to-1 victory over the White Sox today before 6,970 spectators. Southpaw Eddie Smith contributed the winning run to the Cubs when he hit Bill Nicholson with a pitched ball with the bases loaded in the eighth inning, forcing in Stan Hack with the decisive tally.

Young Lou Novikoff, the National League's most publicized yearling, made an inauspicious debut before the North Side fans, going hitless in four trips to the plate, twice with vital runs on.

Hank Hits 2 Homers

Dayton, Ohio, April 11 (AP).—Unleashing an 18-hit attack, including two homers by Hank Greenberg and one by Rudy York, the Detroit Tigers overwhelmed the World Champion Cincinnati Reds, 15-3, today.

Each of Greenberg's clouts—in the first and fifth—found a mate on base, and York connected immediately after the big outfielder had rounded the bases for the second time.

Neither Monte Pearson, former Yankee, nor Gene Thompson, who succeeded him in the sixth, puzzled the Tigers. Four hits, all singles; three walks, an error and a passed ball contributed to a five-run Tiger spree in the sixth. They added four more in the seventh and sent Gene to the showers before a man was out. Sophomore Johnny Hutchings finished the game.

Alton Benton and Bobo Newsom gave the champs ten hits.

Card Homers Win

Tulsa, Okla., April 11 (AP).—Capt. Terry Moore's two home runs accounted for half the St. Louis Cardinals' total score in their 8-to-5 victory over Tulsa of the Texas League today.

The first, in the third inning with a man on base, tied the score and the second, in the fifth, also with a man on, put the National Leaguers into a lead they never relinquished.

Don Padgett, of the Cards, hit a homer in the ninth.

Pirates Beat Macks

Hutchinson, Kans., April 11 (AP).—Hitters had another field day today as the Pittsburgh Pirates won their third straight game from the Philadelphia Athletics, 18-13.

Bob Elliott, Elbie Fletcher and Virgil Davis got homers for the Bucs, and Pitcher Lee Ross hit one for the A's. Frankie Hayes had a big day at bat, collecting five hits for the losers. In the three-hit division were Elliott, Davis, Maurice Van Robays and Debs Garms, of the Pirates, and Bob Johnson, and Sam Chapman, of the A's.

Norfolk, Va., April 11 (AP).—Lou Ciola, clever Maury High School righthander, hurled a no-hit, no-run game here today as the Commodores defeated Granby High School, 1-.

The youthful Italian fanned ten batters and didn't issue a single base on balls. He fielded his position perfectly, handling seven chances without a miscue.

Bruins Seek Stanley Cup Title Tonight

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 11.—All but one of the Stanley Cup playoffs, the bruised and battered Detroit Red Wings, three down to the Boston Bruins in the best-out-of-seven series, underwent some line-up changes today.

Manager Jack Adams said Harold Jackson would be back on defense and that Alex Motter would play center on a line with Carl Liscombe and probably Eddie Wares in tomorrow night's fourth game here.

Jackson was benched in the last setto. Wares, who has been ailing with an injured shoulder, will replace Ken Kilrea if he is ready to play.

So far it has been all Boston. The Bruins won the first three games by respective scores of 3 to 2, 2 to 1 and 4 to 2, and need only a victory in the next encounter to become the first team to win the cup in four straight games.

All the more uncomfortable from the Red Wings' point of view is the fact they haven't been able to take the Bruins' measure in 12 games since April 5, 1940.

G. W. Golfers Defeat Terrors In Debut Here

George Washington's newly organized golf team made its first start a successful one yesterday at Kenwood, defeating Western Maryland's representatives, 6½ to 2½.

Their effort launched by Bob Fleming's 3-and-2 victory over Fred Holloway, the Colonials were never behind, though the Green Terrors tied matters in the other half of the first foursome. Carl Betsch, local linksman, was nosed out by Dick Hausler, 2 and 1, and the best ball was all even.

It was the last Western Maryland triumph until Rip Hudson came in with a 6-and-5 decision over John Kokoski in the last foursome.

Complete results:

Fleming (G. W.) defeated Holloway, 3 and 2; Hausler (W. Md.) defeated Betsch, 2and 1. Best ball—All even.

Dillon (G. W.) defeater Preston, 4 and 3; Grady (G. W.) defeated Eckenrode, 3 and 1. Best ball—G. W., 4 and 3.

Kleh (G. W.) defeated Lavin, 7 and 6; Hudson (W. Md.) defeated Kokoski, 6 and 5. Best ball—G. W., 2 and 1.

HAIGHT

Dear Boss:

Ever since I stopped writing to you regularly, my portable typewriter has been heckling me. The old bum cocks his punch-drunk letter "I" at me every morning and lets me have it. He says I'm a sissie for discontinuing the letters and that I'm a traitor for letting The Post readers down. This morning I got a little sick of his line, so I gave him a kick that shook him so hard an empty half-pint bottle and dribble of Miami sand fell out.

Well, Boss, I guess I'm just an old softy. I hated myself the very moment my foot struck him. I picked him up, straightened his ribbon, patted him gently and sat him on the dining room table. He didn't say a word. I pulled up a chair, put in a piece of paper, pressed down on the shift and poised my finger over the letter "D." The old typewriter must have had a feeling that I was going to tap out "Dear Boss," because darned if he didn't break out in a grin and say, "Shoot the mirth to me girth."

Don't get me wrong, Boss. I can stand for a lot of ribbing—perhaps it's because my ribs aren't exactly protruding. I laughed it off the other afternoon at Bowie when a drunk patted me on the stomach and said, "So that's the talk of the town." I didn't resent any of those verses the guys and gals wrote about me—not even that one about Haight and Haight that ended with "And all that was left of that old pair was a pot of grease and a mat of hair."

I have read every line of fan letters that started with "Dear Crisco" and "Dear Four-Door" and "Dear Thomas Circle." I have been patient with everybody who has phoned my house night and day, asking why I quit writing letters to you. I have been tolerant, understanding, considerate, humble and obliging. I have listened attentively and I have answered mail promptly.

But there's one guy—Boss, there's a song that's called "I've Got You Under My Skin." Well, my carcass stretches my skin so tight that there isn't room for anybody else. But now that Bowie is opened my bankroll ain't what it used to be and I'm overdue at the barber shop, so let's say this guy gets in my hair.

Here's what happened. Last Tuesday night I wanted to see Tony Galento and Buddy Baer. The little lady wanted to go to see "Great-Grandfathers of Boys Town." I told her that I wanted to try to write a funny letter about the fight, which, by the way, was too funny for words. Well, I finally got away, but it was like a fish straightening out a hook.

Well, after the fight I came home with a quart—of ice cream, honest. The little lady gave me a look that was so cold I thought we were out of furnace oil. At first, I blamed it on surprise that I had stopped at High's instead of getting high.

I had to say something, Boss, so I asked, "Any phone calls?" I didn't know I was going to do it, but darned if I didn't score a direct it. The little lady opened up on me and you would have thought she hit the verbal jackpot.

Well, Boss, I believed that word greeting I got when I came home from Miami had set an all-time record, but that was like the evening breeze that wafts through the cyprus trees compared to the gale the little lady whipped up.

She didn't harp on that "working my fingers to the bone" and she didn't bring in any of that "slaving over a hot stove all day." The gal came up with some brand-new ones. She didn't rake me over the coals, she raked the coals over me.

And why? Well, tell the truth, Boss, I don't blame her. It seems the minute I got out of the house the phone started ringing. She said, "He isn't home" so much that it was beginning to sound like a record with a groove worn in it.

Along about 11 o'clock, the phone rang for the umpteenth time and the little lady swished to it, counted ten to try to make the Hello" mellow, and here's what happened:

"May I speak to Mr. Haight?"

"He isn't home."

"Then this is the maid, I presume——"

Just on account of that I've got to wear a doghouse in the Easter parade.

Cameo Nine Clashes With Hoyas Today

It will be college baseball versus sandlot baseball today at Georgetown Medical Field when the Hoyas, undefeated in two games this year, take on the powerful Cameo Furniture nine of the Washington Post-Industrial League.

Starting time of the practice game, which will have all the fixings of a regular one, will be 2:30. Bill Wixted, the Hoyas' right-hand mound star, probably will be faced by Otie Printz at the start.

In preparation for today's battle, Cameo yesterday tangled with Little Tavern, suffering a 14-6 setback. Putnam's homer with two on and Fowler's triple with the bases loaded made the big difference.

Bridegwater Net Team Beats A. U.

American University suffered its second tennis defeat in four starts yesterday when an invading Bridgewater College team defeated the Eagles, 6—3. A. U. was handicapped by the absence of its regular No. 3 player, Chuck Doolittle, who is sidelined with the measles.

Portela (B.) defeated Landaman, 7—5, 6—0; Webb (A. U.) defeated G. Nipe, 6—0, 6—0; J. Nipe defeated Evans, 6—4, 0—6, 6—3; Eger (B.) defeated MacCarthy, 6—4, 7—5; Myers (B.) defeated Nielsen, 6—4, 7—5; Clague defeated Johnson, 6—0, 7—2. Portela and G. Nipe (B.) defeated Landsman and Evans, 7—5, 6—0; Webb and Etchison (A. U.) defeated Myers and Eger, 9—7, 2—6, 6—2; Nielsen and MacCarthy (A. U.) defeated Stanger and Crosby, 7—5, 6—2.

'Ducky' Pond, Former Head At Yale, Is Named Bates Coach

Old Eli Star Will Have Charge of Grid And Baseball Teams

By the Associated Press

Lewiston, Me., April 11.—The appointment of Raymond (Ducky) Pond, former Yale coach, as head football and baseball coach at Bates College, was announced today by President Clifton D. Gray, of Bates.

Pond had been reported during the past few weeks as having the inside track for the place of Wendell D. Mansfield, who recently resigned to return to his alma mater, Springfield (Mass.) College. Pond resigned his post at Yale after last fall's disastrous season, although his contract had one more year to go.

Pond, who made football history in the famous mud battles at Yale in 1923-24, was elevated to position of head coach in January of 1934, succeeding Reggie Root. At the time of his promotion, Pond was serving as junior varsity coach.

Prior to his appointment, Pond was the storm center of a controversy involving graduates and undergraduates over the selection of "outside" coaches. Yale athletic authorities, however, stuck to the traditional policy and the Pond faction won out.

Bob Brownell In Semifinals Of Athens Golf

By the Associated Press

Athens, Ga., April 11.—The jinx of the Southern Intercollegiate golf tournament worked overtime today and for the third straight year the medalist—this time Earl Stewart of Louisiana State—suffered elimination in the second round.

The man who did it was slim, nervous Dixon Brooke of Virginia, National intercollegiate champion, and he won his match with a sensational comeback on the back nine after rounding the turn 2-down.

Playing with cold precision he took the tenth and eleventh holes, dropped the twelfth, took the fourteenth, lost the sixteenth, and then slammed two straight birdies to win the seventeenth and eighteenth—a 1-up victory for the match.

Two Under Par

Unofficially Brooke was two under par for the 73-stroke layout, while Stewart finished one under the standard. Brooke had gained the second round, when Grover Poole of Duke withdrew with a case of measles. Stewart took a first-round win, 5 and 4, from his teammate, Dale Morey.

Meanwhile, a willowy junior college student, Charles Harper, of Georgia Military College, whose ineligibility was not discovered until after he qualified yesterday, ousted the tournament favorite, Cary Middlecoff of Mississippi, 3 and 2.

Harper, who graduated from Valdosta High School in February and entered the Milledgeville (Ga.) Junior College, was granted special permission to play in the championship tournament after shooting a 72-78—150 in the qualifying test.

Today he thumped Georgia's Jimmy Mason in the first round, 5 and 4, then took Middlecoff over the bumps with nine straight pars on the first nine and a birdie and one bogie through the sixteenth hole on the back nine. Middlecoff, who was 3-down at the turn after taking bogies on the first, third and sixth holes, never was able to recover.

In the lower bracket Bob Brownell, Washington, D. C., golfer, of Duke, gained the semifinals with a 2-and-1 victory over Granville Sharpe, of Davidson, who yesterday tied with Middlecoff for runner-up. Brownell earlier trimmed Bill Battle, of Virginia, 7 and 5, in the first round, while Sharpe eliminated Lee Ramsel, of L. S. U., 4 and 2.

Arnold Blum, of Georgia, forged into the semifinals with a 6-and-5 victory over Jack Dewitt, of Duke. Blum, earlier, eliminated Chuck Alexander, of Duke, brother of last year's medalist, by the same score, while Dewitt upset highly rated Elliot Waddell, of Georgia, 1-up.

Brooke meets Harper tomorrow morning to determine which will square off against the winner of the Brownell-Blum match in the afternoon final.

Yanks Return Borowy To Newark Bears

New York, April 11 (AP).—Hank Borowy, young right handed pitcher from Fordham University who was given a long trial with the Yankees this spring, today was returned to the Newark Bears of the International League. Borowy was not signed to a Yankee contract and thus did not have to be optioned to Newark. He turned in several fine performances early in the training season but faltered toward the end.

Paul Jarman Has 155,401 For Pin Honors

Paul Jarman, Columbia Specialty, rolled 155, 401 in the Chevy Chase Commercial League at the Ice Palace but had to divide his set honors with Jack Talbert, Hot Shoppes, who also counted 401. The Mount Vernon Mortgage quintet won high team game with a 631 count, while J. C. Flood had three games of 113 each to spark the team bearing his name to high set of 1,882. The Ramblers still lead the league.

Arcadia

Ruth McClintic, Daly's Food Shop, sparked the last meet of the Ladies' Independent League at Arcadia with highs of 138 and 371 that helped her girls score a sweep over the Greyhounds to take second position away from the D. D. W.'s, with whom they were tied until last night. The D. D. W.'s had high team game of 527, and both Daly's and Kidwell's Senators counted 1,539 to tie for high team set with the latter winning all three from United Typewriters. Kidwell's Senators won the flag, with Daly's next, and the D. D. W.'s third.

Hyattsville

Rolling in a benefit match for the Prince Georges County Boys Club, the Del Rios will go up against Fred Murphy's champion Arcadia team tomorrow at 2 o'clock at Oscar Hiser's Hyattsville Recreation. Admission is 25 cents and the proceeds will go to help the club funds. Perce Wolfe will pit Astor Clarke, Tony Santini, Hokie Smith, Ed Blakeney and Harry Hilliard against last year's District League champion Arcadians, who are: Fred Murphy, Eddie Keith, Nick Chaonas, George Demeres, Ollie Pacini and Mike Avon. The match promises to be one of the most interesting of the weekend as the local duckpin great are numbered in the two teams.

Paul Boyd and Buck Sampson, both of the Riverdale Heights quintet of the Prince Georges Volunteer Fire Department loop at Hyattsville Recreation, led the play last night with highs of 134 and 352, respectively. The Riverdale team won high game after a 548 pinfall while Riverdale Heights took the set with 1,629 and three games from Bladensburg to finish in front of the others. Glendale, erstwhile leaders, were defeated 3-0 by Riverdale and dropped to second place in the standing.

Father-Son Sports Reunion Set May 4

Although "show boat" is the theme of this year's renewal, the eighteenth annual father and son banquet at the Hotel Mayflower May 4 will seem more like a sports reunion.

That much, at least, is gained from an announcement yesterday by Sidney Lust, chairman of the event which is sponsored annually by the Washington Hebrew Congregation Brotherhood.

From the gridiron there'll come Redskins Clem Stralka, Andy Farkas, Mickey Parks, Dick Farman, Clyde Shugart, Turk Edwards, Frank Filchok, Charlie Malone, Sam Babich, Bill Young and Bob Masterson.

Coaches who have accepted invitations include Ray Flaherty, Mush Dubofsky, Dutch Schultz, Jack Hagerty, Staff Cassell, Bill Reinhart, Geary Eppley, Dutch Bergman and Edward LaFond.

HOW'S YOUR SARTORIAL I.Q.

We are not suggesting that you go about in your shirt sleeves. But we do want to emphasize that linen should show at collar and cuffs . . . not just for appearance, but it puts a washable fabric between you and your suit. Your suit should be so fitted that from 3/8" to 3/4" of shirt collar shows at the back of your neck. Coat sleeves should allow from 1/2" to 1" or more of shirt cuff to show. How much depends upon your arms. If they are shorter than average, like Bing Crosby's, then cuffs show only about 1/4". But if you're in Gary Cooper's class, an inch wouldn't be too much.

Barrymore Breaks on Top and Takes Greenbury at Bowie

Young Rides $5.40 Shot To Victory

Happy Hunting, Cofavorite, Is Second; Riding Lights Runs Third

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 11.—J. H. Stotler, former trainer for Alfred G Vanderbilt, saddled Barrymore today and the 3-year-old son of High Quest made every post a winning one in the Greenbury Purse, top event on the program. Barrymore stumbled leaving the gate in his first start here but came out of the stall sure-footed today and drove to the imaginary wire a length and a half in front of the nearest opposition

George A. Garrett's Happy Hunting finished second, just as he did in his season's debut last week. A half length farther back came Walter M. Jefford's Biding Light. Only six horses answered the call to the track for the 6-furlong dash.

Barrymore Pays $5.40

Barrymore, second to Fair Hero here last week, won his second race of the year in seven starts, having scored in one attempt at Santa Anita last winter. He was capably handled by Jockey Sterling Young and stepped the three quarters in 1:14.

The victory of Barrymore made it four and a half favorites in five races for the public choice backers. Barrymore, paying a $5.40 mutuel, was a co-favorite with Happy Hunting.

Jockey Young got Barrymore away winging and the gelding, carrying 122 pounds, drew out to a clear lead over Riding Light going to the first turn. Happy Hunting came in on the rail and was in third position on the trip to the stretch. Riding Light began to tire and Happy Hunting rallied mildly. Young, however, kept Barrymore to a drive to the end.

Favorites Dominate Card

Short price favorites dominated the early portion of the program. The card began with a rousing finish by the Cannaday Farm's About Face, which allowed her to get up in time to win by a head over Mrs. L. M. O'Shea's Very Graceful. In third position came Chaffer, a daughter of Challenger II, making her debut. About Face paid only $2.90 in graduating over a field of Maryland foals which included Walter Haight.

The daily double paid a mere $8.90 when W. R. Roberts' Irish Moon put the finishing touches on the twin wager. After meeting defeat by narrow margins twice here, Irish Moon came from far back and won in approved going away fashion. The veteran mare paid $5.10 and closed two lengths in front of Razacla with Blablah in third position.

Berg Twice Winner

Jockey Manny Berg, who rode About Face, came back to make it two winners in the third race. This time he was aboard Jouett Shouse's Joanny. The pair took the lead soon after the break and held it to the wire. Nilon and Drift Along were the other money horses. Joanny drew a steady play and was the third straight favorite to score She paid $6.40.

Winning favorite No. 4 was Mrs. V. P. Noyes' Match Point. The 7-year-old gelding saved ground on the inside of Red Jack and went ahead in the stretch to score by three lengths. Red Jack staggered into second money ahead of War Noise. Only four others competed in the battle over the mile and a sixteenth route. Match Point was odds-on at a $3.30 mutuel.

RAZACLA was in the first flight from the start and came gamely in the stretch drive, but could not resist the winner. BLAHBLAH went to the front at once, drew clear, but weakened suddenly inside the sixteenth pole. OWALLER was well placed throughout and tired.

Dear Al:

I'm peeved at the colt, Walter Haight. I bet $2 on him to win and $2 that he would finish last. Darned if he didn't get going in the final jumps and beat out Barbara R. But you can't blame the youngster for running poorly. The only colt in the field and running against five fillies, he was only trying to be polite, or would you say, just like a Haight, always running after the women. Placing Judge J. P. Turner, sr., and his son, Clerk of the Scales J. P. Turner, jr., leave Sunday for Havre de Grace where they fill similar roles. Placing Judge Eddie Brennan departs for Pimlico, where he will be in the steward's stand during the Maryland Jockey Club's session. Jockey Johnny Kacala of Baltimore, has been called to the colors and is stationed at Fort George Meade near home. Trainer Howard Hoffman is confined to the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. His son-in-law Jimmy Watts has been caring for his horses and saddled Gayle F, a galloping winner yesterday.

Jockey "Red" Howell passed through here en route from Florida to Narragansett Park. Howell was the star of the recent Tropical Park meeting. Dick Pending has been named trainer of the stable which L. E. Torreyson is gathering together. Pending also handles George Perry's string. A. Derrico purchased Mormiss at private terms from Victor Emanuel. Russell Oakes phoned that Charles Town is beginning to get busy as the opening date of May 12 nears. Johnny Morrissey, the starter will be on hand April 21 to start schooling work at the starting gate. More than 200 horses are on the grounds including Berwyn and J. Hal which R. C. Waple claimed here. The track had felt the disc and harrow and is in fine shape. President and Mrs. Al J. Boyle have returned from Hot Springs, Ark., where they vacationed. The condition books for the meeting which goes 48 days and ends July 5 will be out next week. See you on the rail today. BILL.

First race—OURAGAN has been shopping around and this looks like the right spot. Seems capable of carrying the weight and I have reason to believe he will take it all. The Jacobs entry of SPARKING and AIRWIN seem due respect and will be in the thick of contention. MISS MAKER is a doubtful starter but is rounding into best form.

Second race—TIME PASSES has been showing flashes of form and appears to have found a field that he can whip. Needs only the right handling. IN MEMORY loves this track and will be right there. ROUGH BRIGADE will be a threat if taken off the reserve list.

Third race—OAK TAR ran away with a somewhat similar gang last out. This one is fit as hands make horses and looks like a repeater. LEE'S JIMMIE has been passed along as one with a good chance and should be in the money. FLOOD II to take care of the others.

Fourth race—KING'S COLORS runs for the Magic Stable and takes off weight. The opposition seems to suit and I'm going to be there. The Bedwell entry of CREEPY MOUSE and GINOCA is formidable. DOUBLE B breaks off the rail and promises to be a dangerous contender.

Fifth race—The Denemark entry of PRAIRIE DOG and COURT DANCE appears nicely placed in this sprint. The former has the early speed and the stretch punch. SMART CRACK won on an off track here and will be in the thick of the battle for this. TODDLE ON has been training well.

Sixth race—RINGIE was prepared for this in that recent sprint. Seems to have everything it takes to win the day's feature and I'm going to string along. ROBERT L had trouble last out and still was good enough to win. Gives the top one 5 pounds. ADVOCATOR'S bandages slipped last out. HONEY CLOUD doesn't look like HONEY CLOUD to me.

Seventh race—NOSY was forced to be pulled up sharply in that recent effort and The Post charts said so. This one is much better than shown and with racing luck will gallop. DON PECOS is as sharp as those good races here. DIZZY DAME for the show end.

Eighth race—MONEY MUDDLE has the stretch punch to defeat this kind and is just rounding into form. SUN FOX and TRAMP SHIP to fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—NOSY.

Record Field Competes Today in Middleburg Race Meeting

88 Entries Are Listed For 6 Events

Leading American Timber Toppers to Vie for Middleburg Cup and 'Chase Title

Special Dispatch to The Post

Middleburg, Va., April 11.—With a record-breaking number of entries, the spring race meet of the Middleburg Hunt Racing Association, which will be held Saturday on the beautiful Glenwood Park Course, promises the greatest day of racing in Middleburg history. Eighty-eight entries fill the six-race card. The well laid out course is in splendid condition and all is in readiness for the large attendance of hunt meeting fans that is expected.

Leading timber horses and first flight hunters in America are entered in the two timber features, the Middleburg Cup Steeplechase, of 4 miles over timber with $1,000 purse, and the Raymond Belmont Memorial National Hunter Championship Steeplechase, with the $1,000 hunt panelling fund benefit purse. The number one star of the timber racing circuit in 1940, William J. Clothier's Henchman, from Philadelphia, is the expected favorite for the Middleburg Cup, along with Rokeby Stables' Memory Lane, who recently won the Carolina Cup in Camden, S. C., for his owners, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon.

Henchman's Main Threat

Paul G. Daly, of Connecticut, has entered his Mansfield Park, a gelding capable of beating Henchman, as he did last fall in the celebrated Meadow Brook Hunt Cup on Long Island. Also to be considered in the Middleburg Cup is Mrs. Frank M. Gould's Hold Forth, who all but beat Blockade, the three times Maryland Hunt Cup winner, last fall at Middleburg. There are ten entries in this race.

The Raymond Belmont National Hunter Championship has drawn the champion point-to-point winners of this season in its 26 entries. This initial race, which carries a purse of $1000 to be distributed to the first three hunts having horses to finish, will be run for the glory of the hunt rather than the individual and the money will be used for improving the respective hunt's fencing.

T. Beatty Brown's Comedienne is slated to be the favorite in this race. She has won three point-to-point races this spring and has always come in many lengths in front of the field. The speedy mare will be ridden by her owner and is a Piedmont Hunt entry. Mrs. Crompton Smith's Mowgli, also a steady runner and winner of the Redland Bowl this year, will be ridden by J. S. Harrison, and is a Middleburg Hunt entry.

Manarue Entered

From the North will come Miss Ethel L. Chubb's Manarue, of the Sewickley Hunt near Pittsburg, Pa., and Mrs. George R. Packard's Rockland, of the Pickering Hunt near Philadelphia, to give the Virginia horses a close chase. From the Green Spring Valley Hunt in Maryland will be James McHenry's Party Lines, and another Maryland horse that has come to the front this season is H. L. Welsh's Windsor Boy. Others in the long list will furnish stiff competition for the favorites.

The two brush races have attracted winners this season with such well-known horses as Bliss Flaccus' Greek Idol, Mrs. Frank M. Gould's Fred Astaire, R. V. N. Gambrill's Tioga, Mrs. M. E. Whitney's Airy Spirit, W. B. Cocks' Get Out, F. Ambrose Clark's Night Heron, and many others.

The program will open with the Wanquepin, a 1½-mile hurdle race, at 2 p. m. The William Skinner Memorial, 2½ miles brush, will follow, and then The Middleburg Cup Steeplechase. This will be followed by The Panther Skin, 2 miles, brush. The Raymond Belmont Steeplechase, and the program will close with The Covert, 1⅛ miles on the flat.

Cavaliers Beat V.M.I., 10 to 9, In Last Inning

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., April 11.—Scoring three runs after two were out in the ninth, Virginia defeated Virginia Military Institute here today, 10 to 9, to register its first Big Six triumph of the season.

McCann doubled and scored on Jones' error on Wiltshire's roller. Harman was purposely passed and Walsh's timely two-bagger sent across the tying and winning runs.

The Cadets pounded the offerings of two Cavalier twirlers, Cave and Willey, to all corners of the lot, collecting 16 hits, which included two circuit blows, one triple and seven doubles. Carney led the assault with two home runs, a double and a single.

After being blanked for four innings, Virginia registered seven runs in the next three frames, mainly on home runs by Willey and Harman. Walsh got two doubles, and Dodson and McCann one each.

Bill Lee Comes to Terms With Cubs; Dons Uniform

Salary Believed to Be in Neighborhood Of $11,000; Hurler Anxious to Work

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 11.—Big Bill Lee, erstwhile ace pitcher of the Chicago Cubs, ended his long holdout siege today and accepted terms of a one-year contract.

LEE

Lee, who won only nine games last season, previously had balked at signing a contract for $10,000. He was paid $17,500 last season. The Cubs originally offered him $12,500 but when Lee failed to report for spring training at Catalina Island he was cut another $2,500.

Shortly after coming to terms with General Manager James Gallagher, Lee donned a uniform and began limbering up while the Cub-White Sox exhibition game was in progress.

Terms of the contract were not divulged but Gallagher said the offer contained no bonus arrangements. Gallagher said yesterday that Lee would have to sign for $10,000 or not play. Lee replied at that conference that he could not play for that figure.

It was presumed, however, that Lee and Gallagher with a bit of prodding from Manager Jimmy Wilson, who admits the club needs pitchers, reached a compromise amount of about $11,000.

"I'm satisfied and ready to go to work," Lee said.

He appeared fit, explaining that he had been working out for the past five weeks at his Louisiana home. He asked Wilson to let him pitch against the White Sox Sunday in the final exhibition game.

Lee's capitulation leaves the Cubs still with one holdout, Outfielder Hank Lieber, who is still at his Tucson (Ariz.) home. It is understood the Cubs have offered him $15,000, reportedly the same salary he drew last season.

C.U. Trackmen Compete Today At Annapolis

Catholic University will open a track schedule of 13 events today when it competes with William and Mary and Navy in a triangular meet at Annapolis.

The Cards, weakened by the loss of three of their most dependable point-getters, do not expect to accomplish much in this opening affair. The absence of Charlie Moutenot, sprinter, high jumper, pole vault and broad jumper, Pete Sachon, weight thrower, and Joe Carrig, middle distance runner, has practically ruined Coach J. Dorsey Griffith's hopes of a successful campaign.

Mountenot has left school to study to be a Marine officer, Carrig has joined up with F. B. I., and Sachon has been declared ineligible for track because he allegedly was paid for playing in the Smoke Bowl football game at Richmond in January.

Mainstay of the C. U. team is John Weschler, who is entered in no less than four individual events today. Weschler is to run in the 100, 220 and 400 and then try his luck at throwing the javelin.

Remainder of C. U.'s schedule for season:

April 21, Villanova, at Brookland; 23, quadrangular—Bridgewater, American, Gallaudet and C. U., at Brookland; 25-26, Penn Relays, at Philadelphia; 30, Maryland, at College Park.

May 3, Naval Apprentice School, at Norfolk, Va.; 5, Wake Forest, at Wake Forest, N. C.; 7, triangular—Randolph-Macon, American and C. U., at Brookland; 10, Johns Hopkins, at Brookland; 14, Western Maryland, at Westminster, Md.; 17, Mason-Dixon Conference championships at Homewood Field, Baltimore, Md.; 21, La Salle of Philadelphia, at Brookland; 24, District of Columbia A. A. U. championships at College Park, Md.

James Wins D. C. Squash Racquet Title

R. H. James, of the Naval Academy, outsteadied Lieut. T. J. Hamilton, a service opponent from the Naval Air Station, to win the D. C. A. A. U. Squash Racquets championship at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday, 15-9, 9-15, 15-12, 6-15 and 15-12.

The foes alternated in winning the first four games in the crucial round, but in the fifth it was James' mastery of control which decided. A gold medal went to the Annapolis shot-maker in token of his victory.

A consolation match, to decide third place, went to Edward Adelsheim, of the "Y," over Nat Rogg, another "Y" racqueter. The latter started strongly, winning the first game by 16-14, but Adelsheim's pace gradually wore him down and he lost the next three games, 15-12, 15-10 and 15-7.

Streamliners Win Match Over Lafayette Pinmen

The Southern Railway Streamliners bowling team won two games out of three from Lafayette last night at the Lafayette Center. The winners posted a 1,758 total, while the losers carded 1,709.

Rudy Jarman, of the winners, tallied high game and set of 155 and 396, respectively.

Smart Michigan Nine Whips Terps, 13 to 5

Wolverines Open Season With Impressive Victory; Loss Is Maryland's Fourth

By Jack Munhall

A smart, well-coached Michigan nine opened its season yesterday by handing University of Maryland its third loss in five games, 13-5, at College Park.

Ray Fisher's Wolverines fielded and ran the bases with all the cunning of their namesakes in scoring an impressive victory. Interested spectators included Jim Castiglia, star Georgetown catcher, and other Hoya players who were scouting the visitors whom they meet at the Hilltop next Friday.

Michigan rushed over five runs in the first inning as Bill Fulton, the Terps' crippled sophomore pitcher suffered a wild streak, and never permitted Maryland to tie the count. But still the difference in mechanical ability between the two teams was not nearly so pronounced in Michigan's favor as the score indicates.

Terps Outsmarted

More than anything else, the Terps were outsmarted by the Wolverines who twice stole home and who capitalized on all of the many errors of omission charged to the Marylanders, most of them committed on the base paths.

Michigan slugged Fulton, Max Hunt and Harry Crouthamel for 15 hits, and so timely were its blows that only four Wolverines perished on the bases. The Terps reached Mickey Stoddard for 11 hits but, though they often had the Michigan pitcher hanging on the ropes, they never quite were able to kayo him. A double play in the fifth was one of the factors that enabled Stoddard to go the route. He seemed to grow progressively stronger and Maryland was held hitless in the last three innings.

Frank Chamberlin, Michigan third baseman, socked two triples and a single to lead the visitors' attack which produced five runs in the first, three in the fourth, four in the eighth and one in the ninth. For Maryland the offensive stars were Mearle DuVall, first baseman, who drove in three runs with a pair of singles, and Leib MacDonald second sacker, with two singles and a double, delivered on his first three trips.

Fulton, the slender lefthander who is considered a promising pitcher though his right hand is of practically no baseball use, got into immediate trouble. He walked leadoff batter Davey Nelson and pitched singles to Don Holman and Mike Sofiak. Bill Steppon forced Holman at the plate, Fulton to "Pop" Wharton to Kenny Bransdorf, but Sofiak and Steppon worked a double steal and Sofiak crossed the plate with the second Michigan run. Fulton's control lapsed again and he issued passes to Dick Wakefield and George Ruehle.

Hunt Takes Over

Maryland sent in righthander Max Hunt to replace Fulton, and Max, after yielding a base-clearing triple to Chamberlin, ended the inning on a pair of infield grounders. Hunt pitched creditably enough until the eighth, but sloppy fielding by his teammates enabled Michigan to get a trio of tallies in the fourth. In the eighth Hunt tired and the Wolverines hit him hard for four runs. Crouthamel worked the final inning for Maryland, allowing one run on a single and a triple.

For a while it appeared that Maryland might overcome Michigan's first-inning 5-0 lead. The Terps pounded the ball for two runs in both the first and third innings, but after threatening to continue their outbursts in the fourth, they were silenced by Stoddard. After the fourth, Maryland made only four hits, three of which it bunched in the fifth to score its final run.

The Maryland scoring went like this: First inning—One out, Fritz Maisel walked, MacDonald, Frank Dwyer and DuVall singled. Third inning—Maisel and MacDonald singled, Dwyer was thrown out, second to first, Maisel scoring, and DuVall flied to center tallying MacDonald. Fifth inning—One out, MacDonald doubled, Dwyer and DuVall singled, the latter blow scoring MacDonald.

Four 'Heavies' Seek Louis Bout in June

By the Associated Press

New York, April 11.—Managers of three heavyweight contenders besieged Promoter Mike Jacobs' office today, seeking the financially profitable June date for a title bout with Joe Louis.

Jacobs conferred at length with Johnny Ray, manager of Billy Conn. He also talked with Ray Carlin, manager of Lou Nova and Jimmy Johnston, who pilots Abe Simon, and yesterday saw Ancil Hoffman, manager of Buddy Baer.

Jacobs said he would make a final decision within the next few days. It was believed he would stick to the plans he announced two days ago, by which Louis would fight Baer in Washington in May, Conn in New York or Pittsburgh in June, Simon in New York in July and Nova in September at an unannounced site.

Virginia Tech Beats Richmond

Richmond, Va., April 11 (AP).—Virginia Tech's alert baseball team took advantage of the University of Richmond's leaky defense to hand the Spiders a 7-to-4 setback today in their first Southern Conference game.

Richmond got 11 hits off the offerings of Ed Vassar and big George Warriner, who was sent to his rescue in the seventh inning. The Techmen were credited with nine hits, at least three of them doubtful scratches which fast fielding would have prevented.

Thomson Tied In E. Potomac Golf Match

Jimmy Thomson continued to pound the ball in his usual siege gun style yesterday at East Potomac as the Spalding slugger and Tommy Doerer, jr., finished all square in a match with host pro Cliff Spencer and George Dawson, Chicago's top-ranking amateur.

Thomson, who drove hole-high on four of East Potomac's par four holes, the longest the 312-yard seventh, and Dawson, one of the finest iron shot players in the country, each played the course in regulation par 72 strokes. Doerer and Spencer each helped three shots for best ball 69s. Doerer tossed in three birdies, putts of 15, 30 and 40 feet, while Spencer parred three holes where Dawson missed.

Thomson immediately left for New York here he will spend the night and then leave by plane tomorrow night for an extended trip through the South with exhibition stops in Charlotte, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Louisville and a half-dozen other points. Dawson left for his home in Chicago but promised to return for the Chevy Chase Invitation if possible.

It was the second tie match for Dawson in his two-day stay here as he and Al Houghton broke even with Bob Barnett and Horton Smith in the British matches on Thursday.

Thomson and Doerer led, 2 up with three to play yesterday but lost 16 to 17 to pars. Four birdies in a row, two by Thomson and two by Doerer from nine through twelve, inclusive, helped them into the lead.

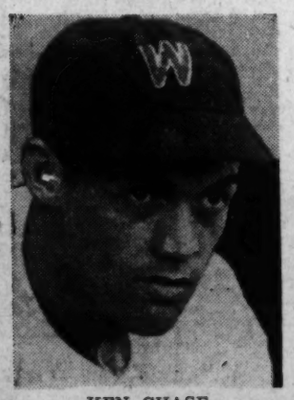
Martinsville, Va., April 11.—When the Nats arrive in Washington tomorrow morning, Bucky Harris will make a strong appeal to Owner Clark Griffith for more pitching . . . he'll ask Griffith to buy, beg or abduct some pitcher capable of at least pitching some relief ball . . .



KEN CHASE

"As I look at my relief pitching now," said Harris, "the situation will have to be awful serious before I take one of my starting pitchers out of the box." . . . Ken Chase's nine inning stint against the Phillies today was a surprise not only to himself but to Harris who had not planned for Chase to pitch more than seven innings . . . But at the end of the seventh Chase volunteered to go the full route . . . George Ferrell, brother of the Nats' catcher, manages this town's team in the Bi-State League . . . And the Mayodan, N. C., team of the same league is managed by Taylor Sanford, brother of the Washington owned first baseman . . . For the past two days, the Nats have been playing on skinned infields that did not own a blade of grass . . . For many of the players, it was the first time they had encountered that kind of an infield since their sandlot days . . . Martinsville is a farm team of the Phillies, which is the reason for scheduling the game here . . . Play today did not start until 4:15 to give factory workers a chance to attend . . . Jimmy Bloodworth is the bravest if not the best ball player of the year . . . He picks the Washington team to win the 1941 pennant . . . He isn't kidding, he says and will remind everybody of his prediction next October when he appears on the "We the People" radio program as the only man in the world who had courage enough to pick the Nats as pennant winners . . . For the third successive day Jimmie Pofahl relieved Buddy Lewis at third base in the late innings and it is now certain that Pofahl will get the job when and if Lewis is drafted into the Army . . . Ben Chapman thrilled the natives in the fifth inning today when he backed against the leftfield wall and with the greatest nonchalance pulled down Bragan's long fly with one hand . . . POVICH.

On the Line With Considine

On the way out we stopped to chat with Mme. Sandwinda, the world's strongest woman. We found her a wonderfully sweet lady with a nice son named Kati, who is a flying cadet and a graduate of the American Academy of Carnegie Hall. Kati said she never spanked him as a lad, and added "thank heaven." Mme. Sandwina's older boy, Ted, fought Carnera, Ernie Schaaf, Knut Hanson Galento and others of that ilk, some of them in the Garden. Mr. Sandwina, a small man, beamed when his wife bent a thick spike for us. "Stronger than Sandow," he said, full of pride.

Send Food To Europe, Pilgrims Plead

Ten "Pilgrims for Humanity" called at the State Department yesterday to beg cooperation in feeding Europe's starving civilians, visited sympathetic members of Congress and wound up the day's activities with a foodless supper at the Friends Meeting House.

The pilgrims said they had walked 115 miles from Wilmington, Del., pulling their belongings in a hand cart and living on war rations, like European refugees, for seven days.

They are members of the Fellowship of Re-creation, an organization similar to and closely allied with the Quakers.

"We come here to beg that the Government of the United States will use its utmost influence to discover a way to end this inhuman situation . . . listen to Christ's command, 'Give ye them to eat,'" John Nevin Sayre, secretary of the fellowship, told James Dunn, who received the pilgrims for Secretary of State Hull.

Petition Presented

Presenting a petition which carried 6,400 names, including religious and educational leaders, Sayre added:

"We are convinced that the conscience of the plain people of American today wants our country to send food—certainly not guns alone—to Europe."

The pilgrims also called on Representative Jeannette Rankin (Republican), of Montana, who voted against World War I, and Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, both of whom expressed sympathy with their aims.

At the Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida Avenue Northwest, the pilgrims and some 50 sympathizers sat at tables set with plates, glasses, silver and napkins, but no food, and listened to speeches.

Miss Muriel Lester, founder of Kingsbury Hall, a settlement house in London, and a traveling secretary of the fellowship, suggested a foodless supper every week.

Catholic Cleric Speaks

The Right Rev. G. R. O'Toole, of Catholic University, declared:

"American Christians, it is we who stand on trial before God. . . . If we turn a deaf ear to the cries of Europe's starving children, then the blood of Christian Europe will be upon our guilty hands.

"Already America's garments are stained red with the blood of China's millions, slaughtered by means of the scrap iron and airplane gasoline that the United States Government licensed for export to Japan."

Assurance that Europe can be fed without aiding Germany was given by John F. Rich, associate secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, who said his organization's work in France gave evidence to that effect.

"We can state categorically," he said, "that our relief efforts have not benefited the Germans. . . . We are satisfied, and it takes an awful lot of confidence to satisfy the Quakers."

"Diners" stood for a minute "in silent remembrance" of "orphans and mothers and people everywhere."

Capital Store Sales Up 36% During Week

Washington department store sales in the week ended April 5 were 36 per cent above sales in the corresponding week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night.

However, the comparison was distorted by the fact that the week of April 5 came before Easter this year but followed the Easter shopping period last year.

Attesting to the quickened Easter buying pace, sales in the latest week were 28 per cent above the week ended March 29. Store sales in District of Columbia for the four weeks ended April 5 showed a 20 per cent gain above the same 1940 period.

For the Fifth Federal Reserve District as a whole, department store sales in the week ended April 5 were 29 per cent above the like period last year.

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board at Washington estimated that department store sales in the week ended April 5 were 17 per cent larger than in the corresponding week last year.

By Federal Reserve districts, comparisons between the week ended April 5 and the corresponding week last year were:

Increases—Boston 19, New York 21, Philadelphia 39, Cleveland 1, Atlanta 17, Chicago 19, Kansas City 15, Dallas 39, and San Francisco 23 per cent.

Sales at New Peak

New York, April 11 (AP).—This week's retail trade reached a new peak for the year "in a spectacular climax of the pre-Easter selling period," Dun & Bradstreet reported today in its weekly survey.

The review cited reports from many centers telling of the best Easter business since the record high 12 years ago.

"For all retail trade," it said, "including food volume, which ran about 12 per cent higher, the advance over the 1940 level was estimated at 15 to 18 per cent.

"Gains were well distributed regionally, although city reports showed the broadest increases still tended to cluster in the South and Middle West.

"A temporary lull developed in wholesale trading as retailers concentrated on selling efforts. Orders for near-term delivery were mainly for filling-in purposes. While moderate in size, these further reduced stocks; some markets were said to be cleaned of seasonal goods, requiring newly produced merchandise for post-Easter promotions."

Insurance Club Elects

Paul Hammack, of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., has been elected president of the Life Insurance Club of Washington, it was announced yesterday. He succeeds Charles Sinclair.

Other officers elected are George T. Black, of Sun Life of Canada vice president, and William D. Macy, of Phoenix Mutual, secretary-treasurer. Directors named are Frank C. Jude, of New York Life; R. K. Miller, of Equitable Life Assurance, and Joseph L. Baldwin, of Northwestern Mutual.

Realty Bonds Up 2.1 Per Cent

The average price of real estate bonds continued upward in March, according to the Amott-Baker index. The increase for the month was 2.1 per cent, the largest for any similar period since last fall. The latest advance makes the ninth consecutive month in which real estate bonds have trended upward.

The Amott-Baker index includes four Washington issues. While Washington Properties, Inc., 7s of 1952 held steady, gains were scored by two issues of National Press Building and one of Mayflower Hotel.

Easter Buying Vies With Yule Trade

New York, April 11 (AP).—News from retail merchandising centers today indicated the Easter shopping rush was fast enough to compete with the traditionally busy Christmas holiday season.

Men's clothes were among the largest traded items. Observers said fear of higher prices later this year was a dominating factor in men's shopping, which more than offset the loss of business growing out of the draft.

By the Associated Press

The General Electric Co. disclosed yesterday it booked in the first three months this year a record-breaking quarterly total of $257,382,000 in new orders, topping by a small margin the orders taken in the final quarter of 1940.

Of the whole, it was ascertained that $112,000,000 definitely was for national defense, but it was explained additional orders indirectly might have arisen from defense requirements.

With the possible exception of the last three months of 1940, the regular commercial orders totaling $145,382,000 likewise were rated the largest in the company's history.

New orders in the first quarter of 1940 amounted to $97,490,000.

Midcontinent Petroleum

Midcontinent Petroleum Corporation and subsidiaries earned 1940 net profit of $2,967,394 after Federal income taxes and other charges, equal to $1.60 a share of capital stock, compared with $2,650,501, or $1.42 a share, in 1939.

Adams Express Co.

The company's plants are operating 24 hours a day, he said, adding that thus far no difficulty has been experienced in obtaining raw materials.

Wright Aeronautical Corp.

Wright Aeronautical Corporation, controlled by Curtis-Wright Corporation, reported for 1940 net profit of $6,656,284, equal to $11.09 a share on its capital stock, compared with $3,740,626, or $6.23 a share in 1939.

Livestock and produce markets were open as usual yesterday.

Morgan Stanley Asks Exemption From SEC Ruling

Morgan Stanley & Co., New York underwriting firm, asked the Securities Commission for an exemption from a rule which might prevent it from receiving an underwriter's fee in connection with the proposed issuance and sale of $120,000,000 of debentures by Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation.

The SEC fixed April 17 for a hearing on the request and also postponed until April 22 a hearing on an application by C. G. & E. covering the proposed new issue.

The Morgan Stanley request was made in view of a decision by the SEC recently in which it held that the underwriters could not collect a $100,000 fee in connection with financing by Dayton Power & Light Co. a year ago because of a possibility that there had been an absence of arm's length bargaining.

Columbia Gas filed a registration statement with the commission covering its proposed issues, which are $92,000,000 sinking fund debentures due 1961, and $28,000,000 of serial debentures, due in 1942-1951. The proceeds will be used for refunding purposes.

Business Highlights

By Standard & Poor's Corp.

Present indications are that the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production will average around 141, or approximately the present level, for the current half year. The second half year will bring progressively higher peaks in many industries, particularly those which are devoting the bulk or all of their efforts to defense. At the same time, the exigencies of the defense program will adversely affect operations in some of the nondefense industries. Some of the durable consumer goods lines, including automobiles, vacuum cleaners, refrigerators, etc., will find it difficult to maintain current operations because of a lack of materials and man power. For these reasons sharp gains in composite production are not likely in the second half year, although output will continue at record levels.

Nylon vs. Silk

Shipments of all types of hosiery recorded an increase of 1.3 per cent in February. Nylon accounted for 468,277 dozen pairs, or a little more than 14.6 per cent of women's full fashioned hosiery shipped in the month. This represents a sizable percentage for a product which was not yet on sale in February, 1940. The nylon encroachment was almost wholly on silk, which recorded a year-to-year decline of 474,298 dozen pairs.

Bankers to Aid Sale of Defense Bonds Sans Profit

Hollywood, Fla., April 11 (AP).—"All out" support of banks to the national defense program was promised today by J. D. Houston, president of the American Bankers Association.

Speaking before the convention of the Florida Bankers Association, Houston said banks would help the Treasury Department distribute the new defense bonds to the public and at the same time continue to provide credit to defense goods products.

"The American Bankers Association has the machinery ready to start to work as soon as the savings bond campaign begins," he added.

"In assisting the Treasury there will be no profit. Nevertheless we shall give our full measure of help. This war has got to be paid for. The money has to be raised and we are going to help raise it, and we are glad to do it."

Celanese and Celluloid Face Court Action

Trenton, N. J., April 11 (AP).—Four groups of Celluloid Corporation stockholders appealed to New Jersey Chancery Court today to investigate the relationship between Celluloid and the Celanese Corporation of America.

The stockholders charged that Celanese, through its stock control of Celluloid, dominated the latter corporation and elected its officers, with a resultant loss of "several millions of dollars" to Celuloid.

Week's Auto Output Estimated at 99,260

Detroit, April 11 (AP).—Automobile production dropped to 99,260 cars and trucks this week, Ward's Reports, Inc., said today. It attributed the decline to the strike at the Ford River Rouge plant.

This week's total, lowest since the holiday period more than three months ago, compared with 116,255 last week and 101,940 at this time last year. Ward's noted that it was the first full week this year in which the volume dropped below the 1940 comparative figure.

Two Forts Sought As Prison Camps For Italian Sailors

The immigration service was understood yesterday to be seeking the use of two War Department camps in North Dakota and Montana as internment sites for several hundred Italian sailors taken off 28 Italian ships when the United States took over the vessels.

Although the arrangement has not yet been completed, the immigration service would like to have Fort Lincoln, near Bismarck, N. Dak., and Fort Missoula, near Missoula, Mont.

A precedent for such internment was set not long ago when the Government moved more than 400 German sailors taken from the scuttled liner Columbus to Fort Staunton, an isolated former CCC camp in New Mexico. The present plans call for sending to Fort Staunton the 50 or more German sailors seized at the same time the Italians were taken into custody.

Medical Groups' Appeal Will Be Reviewed May 2

Merits of the appeal of the American Medical Association and the District Health Society to set aside the verdict of a District Court jury convicting them of violation of the Sherman antitrust laws, will be reviewed by Jutice James M. Proctor May 2, the jurist said yesterday.

A District Court jury convicted the two medical societies and acquitted all 18 individual physician defendants after a two-month trial.

A new trial is sought on the grounds that the jury's verdict is inconsistent, since, it is argued, the societies could not be guilty when they worked through their members, who were found innocent.

The Government contends there is sufficient precedent to allow such a finding.

Pro-Nazi Houseboy Caught, Confesses Nyack Shooting

Minneapolis, April 11 (AP).—Detectives today announced the arrest and confession of Walter Gottlieb Groebli, 18, sought in the shooting in Nyack, N. Y., last January of Percy Whittlesey.

Groebli, who had served Whittlesey as a houseboy, allegedly said he shot his employer six times after an argument over the playing of a phonograph recording of "Sailing Against England," a popular Nazi tune.

Whittlesey, recently has been active in a pro-British committee. The housebov was a Nazi sympathizer.

Groebli was arrested last night when he appeared at the postoffice to pick up a letter sent to trap him.

Sen. Sheppard's Funeral Today

Texarkana, Tex., April 11 (INS).—Funeral arrangements for Senator Morris Sheppard, veteran Texas Congressman, were completed today.

The special train carrying Senator Sheppard's body from Washington is due to arrive in Texarkana early tomorrow. Services will be held at the First Methodist Church at 3 p. m., and burial will be in Rose Hill Cemetery.

Bishop Frank A. Smith, of Houston, will conduct the services.

Board Designates 48 New Cab Stands

The Commissioners and Public Utilities Commission, acting as a joint board, yesterday designated 48 new taxicab stands alongside fire hydrants in downtown Washington.

The cab driver must occupy the driver's seat at all times, however, while standing in these zones. The top of the fire hydrant will be painted yellow, as will a distance along the curb for 10 feet on either side of the hydrant.

The new order will become effective as soon as the hydrants are painted.

Tax Conference Scheduled Next Week

Key members of the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee will open preliminary talks with the Treasury next week on the size and scope of the new defense tax bill, it was learned last night.

Meanwhile, members of the Congressional groups leaned informally toward raising the bulk of an expected $1,500,000,000 in new revenue from changes in the existing corporate and individual income tax structure, without resorting to experimental forms.

One new proposal for raising more than $200,000,000 in this manner would reduce or eliminate credits now allowed individuals in calculating net income for surtax purposes. Under this plan, personal exemptions would be continued for the normal tax but disallowed in computing the surtax. This would put more individuals in the surtax and upper surtax brackets.

No decisions on any specific tax methods had been reached pending next week's opening talks. Both Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee and Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, representing the Senate Finance Committee, will return here for the conferences. Chairman Pat Harrison of the Finance Committee, who is convalescing at Warm Springs, is expected to remain there until the bill nears the Senate early next month. Hearings on a House bill will probably be called by Doughton in the next fortnight.

Colleagues Honor Rutherford Crump At Supply Depot

Hard pressed as it is by the demands of a growing Army, the Quartermaster Depot of Washington paused yesterday to honor a fellow employe, retiring after 43 years service.

Rutherford J. Crump, whose boyhood was spent at the White House, was given a rousing sendoff by officers and civilians of the depot, who presented him with the chair he has used for 35 years, a matched traveling set and a billfold containing a sum of money. Crump said he would rent his home at 619 Rock Creek Church Road, one of the first built in that area, and spend much of his time in travel.

He was born at Cleveland, Ohio, April 11, 1876, and was brought to Washington as a baby when his father became steward and custodian of the White House under President Hayes, for whom Crump was named. While his father remained a White House official, he was a playmate of the Hayes and Garfield children.

Policeman Free Pending Appeal

A Third Precinct policeman, Henry J. Martin, was free under $1,000 bond yesterday after he had been sentenced to one year in prison for assaulting a resident of Foggy Bottom with a nightstick last September.

Martin was given his freedom on bond pending an appeal from the conviction pronounced in District Court by Justice James M. Morris.

Named in nine assault indictments with Martin was James E. Stabler, also of the Third Precinct. Stabler was acquitted while Martin was convicted of simple assault by the jury which tried the pair.

"Soviet Russia cannot remain disinterested or inactive much longer regardless of how much she wishes to do so," the newspaper said. "Russia and America must combine their great forces immediately, actively."

Minor gains dotted the industrial list without accompanying increase in turnover. Kaffirms, coppers, rubbers and oils were quietly maintained.

Contract Bridge

With both sides vulnerable, you, North, hold these cards:

♠Q7
♡Q876
♣KQJ1062

The bidding has gone:

South	West	North	East
1♡	1♠	2♡	2♠
3♡	3♠	?

What do you say now?

Solution

It is quite possible that you can make four hearts, but it doesn't look as though the opponents would allow you to remain in that contract. They would undoubtedly go to four spades and you are not sure of your ability to defeat that bid. Your best call is to pass and hope the opponents stop short of game.

Listen! with Glynn

As someone has said (name on request), if sugaring-off were done by European peasants, Americans would have been traipsing off across the ocean these many years to participate in what would have been called a fascinating custom.

As it is, the observance of maple sugar time in our Northern States is pretty well confined to New Englanders and people who've been fortunate enough to be visiting that section of our country in the spring.

But today a nationwide broadcast is to be devoted to bringing you a word picture of what goes on at a typical sugaring-off party, with 40 Vermonters as guests. It will be heard over WJSV from 12 to 12:15 p. m. in "Columbia's Country Journal."

Jesse Buffum, agricultural director of WEEI CBS's station in Boston, is to serve as master of ceremonies. Among the speakers will be Gov. William H. Willis, of Vermont; Willard Smith, president of the Vermont Sugar Makers Association, and George F. E. Story, a county agricultural agent.

Incidentally a new program, starring Lionel Stander, the popular actor who's reputed to have a heart of gold even though he has the voice of a cement mixer, makes it's debut over WJSV at 10 this morning. It's to be comedy and it's called "The Life of Riley."

Ed Murrow talks from London on, of all things, books, at 2:30 p. m. today over WJSV.

Facts Sway U. S. to Britain, Scientist Says

A psychologist who has watched the American national blood pressure react to the war in Europe expressed the belief yesterday that the actual turn of events there had more effect on public opinion than did British propaganda.

The psychologist was Dr. Steuart Henderson Britt, of George Washington University, addressing the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology at the Wardman Park Hotel. He viewed Americans at the beginning of this war as watching the developments as they might have a football game, siding up but not necessarily overly absorbed.

The first major change in temper came with the fall of Finland. In that tiny country were peoples, Americans thought, who were like ourselves in ideals and outlooks. Then came the bombings of London, the fall of France, the evacuation at Dunkirk and the conquest of many small nations by the Germans.

Saw Security Threatened

Immediately Americans translated these happenings into events threatening the security of their own ideals because the affected peoples were generally considered as like Americans, he said.

These facts had more to do with the conviction that the British should be supported than did anything they had said, Dr. Britt asserted.

"We were watching the destruction of ways of living which we understood," he said.

He did not believe the Germans ever tried to influence American thinking so that it directly would turn to the side of naziism. Rather they tried to turn American thinking against the British, he said.

Research on Yawns

The results of an inquiry into the yawns also were given the society yesterday by Dr. Joe E. Moore, of George Peabody College, Nashville. They are caused either by visual or auditory stimuli, he said. He played a phonograph record of one of his own yawns to illustrate the question.

Once, experimentally, provocatively, he sent some students into a church to set up a yawning, or at least to find out what simulated yawns would do. The congregation responded with 10 real yawns for each 15 simulated ones, he reported.

The yawn, incidentally, has been under investigation certainly since 1755. Then a monument was erected to one James Cooper with the inscribed reminder that he was a "gentleman remarkable for his loud yawning during the time of divine service." Science, he said, has fixed no connection between tiredness and the yawn.

Before being married to Polk, she had been married to and divorced from George Drexel Biddle and Joseph M. Wintersteen, both prominent in Philadelphia society. She and Polk were married last January 31, the day she divorced Wintersteen.

New Features To Mark Today's Glen Echo Opening

Officials said yesterday that more than 50 amusement attractions have been reconditioned and improved for the new season. In addition the picnic groves have been enlarged for the accomodation both of private parties and public gatherings.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer

Distributed by I. N. S.

When we start recalling our ambassadors and consuls it is not because we are going to celebrate the discovery of rocking chairs in one-armed lunch rooms.

It means we are getting ready to lay it on the line, like a hen on a Monday laundry rope.

I used to be one of those fellows who hollered hooray for the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans. But now they are starting to look as narrow as the top of a fence.

We've reached the tit-for-tat, butter-for-fat stage. We chased a couple of European diplomats home and Europe evicted a couple of ours. Now, we will start putting lumps of coal in the snowballs.

But we have to do a lot better with our defense plants. How are we going to get a meal together if the chefs won't stay in the kitchen?

Pan-American Student Chain To Convene Friday

The Pan-American Student Chain, collegiate and high school fraternity, will open its first congress next Friday afternoon in the Carlton Hotel. The fraternity was formed to promote friendly relations between students and professors of the Americas.

Speakers will include Dr. Philip Brown, former United States Minister to Honduras and professor of international law at Harvard and Princeton Universities; Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland; Dr. Valdes Rodriguez, counselor of the Cuban Embassy; K. M. Marshall, president of Chevy Chase Junior College; S. E. Valverde, attache of the Dominican Embassy, and Paul Wooton, correspondent of the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

A story in yesterday's Post reporting the congress was to open yesterday was incorrect. The sessions begin April 18.

Synthetic Drugs Soon May Be Made From Corncobs

St. Louis, April 11 (AP).—Inexpensive substitutes for novocaine, antiseptics and possibly sulfanilamide and its derivatives may soon be made from corncobs, oat hulls and other farm waste materials.

Dr. Henry Gilman, chemistry professor at Iowa State College, said today that substances known as "furans," which can be extracted from almost any of the farm wastes, have a wide variety of applications in medical treatment as yet not appreciated or developed.

"Experiments now being made indicate that some of these chemicals may be more effective than novocaine and cocaine as local anesthetics for minor operations," Dr. Gilman said.

Several, he added, have also been found to be excellent antiseptics.

O'Conor to Get Anti-Jai Alai Resolutions

Resolutions opposing signing of the jai alai bill permitting a referendum on whether pari-mutuel wagering should be permitted in Montgomery County, Md., will be presented to Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor today.

Milton Kronheim, jr., said yesterday that he has an appointment for 10 a. m. today to present resolutions adopted by a mass meeting of more than 200 held Monday night in the Silver Spring Baptist Church.

Following a bitter attack upon the bill by county Protestant ministers, who halted their Palm Sunday services to urge attendance at the mass meeting, the sponsors of the bill announced that they had decided to ask Gov. O'Conor to veto the referendum. The bill was introduced in the closing hours of the session by Delegates James W. Gill, E. Brooke Lee, Ruth Shoemaker and Stanton C. Peelle, jr., and passed by suspension of rules. It was amended the following day to provide for a referendum and passed by the Senate.

Withdrawal of support by the delegates is believed to have killed the bill but opponents say they will continue fighting until the Governor definitely has vetoed the measure.

The county delegates said in withdrawing their support that they are convinced the measure would be approved by a referendum but that none of those who favor the bill had come forward while opponents were highly vociferous, and were led by the church people of the county.

'In the Groove' No Longer, Singer Leaps to Death

Chicago, April 11 (INS).—The gay jargon of the night club world was used to explain the tragedy of the life of Albina Catherine Treivers, cabaret singer, tonight.

Miss Treivers left the following note before she jumped to her death from the thirteenth floor of a Loop hotel:

"Darling, this old hepcat is no longer in the groove and has finally given up. I've tried to go on being the slaphappy, devil-may-care gal you have all been used to seeing, but I find I can't go on any longer. I can't pretend to go on and jive any longer."

The note was addressed to Eleanora Ullen, who said Miss Treivers had been despondent since the death of a close friend a year ago.

False-Teeth Theft Crimps Couple's Easter Feasting

New York, April 11 (INS).—Unless detectives do some pretty rapid sleuthing and recover two sets of false teeth, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brenner will do their Easter feasting on nothing but liquid diets.

The Brenners accused their Negro maid of stealing the plates, worth $360. Police said she admitted giving them to a friend, who "hocked" them for $8 at a pawn shop.

So far police have been unable to find the maid's friend or the pawn shop.

Two Defense Plant Blasts Kill 4, Hurt 16

Birmingham, Ala., April 11 (AP).—Three men were killed and at least 12 injured today, two critically, when an explosion ripped the roof off the Woodward Iron Co.'s merchant iron plant and forced closing of the company.

Three of the injured were in a critical condition.

The blast was heard for 10 miles and brought thousands of curious who hampered rescue work around the shattered boiler building.

The dead are Richard O'Ban, 50; Will Rush, colored, and W. D. Ozley.

The explosion was described by J. B. Price, engaged in repair work nearby, as a "huge ball of fire which covered the whole place."

Investigation indicated the mixture of air and steam from the blowing engine room exploded in the cold blast main, went into the blowing machine and wrecked it.
